EL CERRITO — It was a time for friends, family and recognition of achievement and service last week in the apparatus room of Fire Station 71.

In a ceremony attended by more than 120 people, Fire Chief Mark Scott was sworn in as chief, Jim Dworak and John Dougery were sworn in as battalion chiefs, Hugh Henderson and Michael Pigoni were sworn in as fire captains and John Henderson was sworn in as fire engineer.

Backed by several vintage Fire Department photos and lithographs and pieces from Chief Scott's personal collection of firefighting-related art work, the firefighters and the entire department received praise from City Manager Gary Pokorny, Councilman Larry Damon and others.

Several retired ECFD firefighters returned to the fire station to congratulate their former comrades and wives, sons, daughters, parents, in-laws, neighbors and best friends attended the ceremony.

Each firefighter received his badge of promotion, which was pinned onto his uniform by each mans's wife, and most made brief remarks.

"I do appreciate the honor and I will do my best for the city ," said new Fire Captain Pigoni after his wife Alison pinned his captain's badge to his dress blues.

Eastshore among area parks benefit from new state funds

By Kate Darby Rauch
STAFF WRITER

Two Bayside park projects short on cash but long on vision received a helping hand from the state.

The proposed Eastshore State Park, which will run along the Bay from Emeryville to Richmond, and Ferry Point, a historical pier in Richmond, are among 10 East Bay Regional Park District projects to receive more than $7.5 million in the first round of allocations from a parks bond that voters passed in March.

Renovation of the historical merry-go-round in Tilden Regional Park also was a funding winner.

The Proposition 12 allocations were announced with the passage of the 2000-2001 state budget, signed by Gov. Gray Davis in June.

Albany also was a budget winner when it came to the shoreline. The state budget — not Prop. 12 — includes $637,000 for wetlands improvements on the old landfill just north of Golden Gate Fields racetrack.

The money will be used to reopen two natural lagoons on the peninsula, allowing tidal waters to flow freely, said Daren Fields, city administrator. The lagoons have been blocked by land configurations and debris.

Part of the former landfill, closed in 1983, is owned by the park district and is already included in the Eastshore State Park plans. The remainder, including the tip or "bulb," is owned by the city, which is negotiating with the park district to include it in the new park.

Park district officials are pleased with the decisions, even though some projects didn't make the initial cut or received less money than asked for.

"It's excellent news," said Pat O'Brian, district general manager. "This is the best year ever (in state funding)."

The first round allocated about $500 million statewide of the $2.1 billion approved by voters for park and environmental improvements.

This year's budget surplus buoyed efforts to get a jump-start on spending park bond money, O'Brian said. "They wanted to show the public who voted for Prop. 12 that projects were moving ahead."

Albany school administrator departs for Piedmont

By Clare Curley
STAFF WRITER

Constance Hubbard, a top administrator with the Albany school district for 22 years, announced last week that she is jumping ship to become assistant superintendent of business services and human resources for the Piedmont Unified School District.

The announcement comes amidst a restructuring of several positions in the district, including her own, and only months after director of curriculum and instruction Marianne Camp announced her departure for a position with the Hayward Unified School District.

In a school board resolution honoring Hubbard, she was noted for her "deep sense of commitment and dedication." Superintendent Gary Mills stated he has "truly enjoyed" working with her.

Administrators don't expect to fill the position until the fall.

"We don't know (who will replace her) yet," said Beverly Feusier, Mills's assistant. "We haven't even started looking."

District administrators and school board members alike seem to have expected the announcement. There is a general sense that she had gone as far as she could go in a small district and hopes to climb to a higher position surrounded by new people.

"It isn't a surprise to me," school board member Marsha Skinner said. "I'm aware she is interested in advancing herself." She said Hubbard has applied for other jobs while in her current position.

Skinner conceded that the move comes at a tricky time for the district.

"Certainly it puts a workload on the folks that are still there. Summer's a busy time for us," she said. "I expect the superintendent will be bringing in a consulting contractor for some help in the interim."

Albany High School math teacher Don DePasquale likewise was unsurprised by the news.

"Obviously, (Hubbard) has been looking for a while, and I'm glad she's found a job she likes," he said.

DePasquale speculated that her leaving also stemmed from the fact that she was not given the superintendent job she applied for last year, causing her to seek opportunities outside of the Albany district. "Administrators tend to be looking for bigger and better jobs," he added.

Albany Teachers Association president Dave De Hart has known Hubbard since her counselor days and has been negotiating contracts with Hubbard for the past three years.

"I think the district is really going to miss her talent and expertise," he said. "She has an ability to work well with

City questions private 'parking citations'

By Kate Darby Rauch
STAFF WRITER

EL CERRITO — A private parking enforcement operation that's been issuing $20 tickets at the Target and Walgreen's parking lots in El Cerrito is against the law, according to District Attorney Jim Sepulveda, who called the business "a sham."

People who have received the tickets, which look and read like real city-issued documents — are under no legal obligation to pay them, he said. The stores started the enforcement program in early June.

There are no laws forbidding private parking enforcement, but the only way it's legal is if a city has an ordinance in place allowing the activity, Sepulveda said. El Cerrito has no such ordinance.

Police are the only ones who can enforce parking on public or private property, Sepulveda said

The city is aware of the problem and

Traffic and transportation among EC goals for 2000-01

By J.R. Deaton
STAFF WRITER

EL CERRITO — Goals focusing on traffic and transportation, city operations, economic development and parks and recreation were unanimously adopted Monday by the City Council.

The approved goals for the next 12 months will be included in the 2000-2001 budget document and will include specific "action steps," and timetable as part of the implementation or work plan to accomplish the objectives.

Additionally, the council asked to receive quarterly reports from the city manager on the progress towards reaching the goals.

At the suggestion of Committee of the Whole Co-chair Al Miller, the council also added language stipulating that all council-approved Committee of the Whole recommendations be implemented by the city.

Miller said that if the City Council does not implement certain Committee of the Whole recommendations, it should discuss the matters publicly and make the reasons behind their decisions clear to the community.

"Please do this in a public meeting, so you can explain why you're doing that, and hear out reactions," Miller told the council.

He also reiterated the Committee of

Vandals do $400 damage at senior cent

STAFF REPORT

EL CERRITO — On July 7, a 16-year-old girl from Turlock stole $123 from an 87-year-old El Cerrito woman, according to a police report.

The girl allegedly waited until a man left the elderly woman's Clayton Avenue residence. The man saw her enter the house, where she removed the cash from a purse and fled.

The girl was caught, but the man later decided not to prosecute, according to the report.

■ The El Cerrito Senior Center, located at 6500 Stockton Ave., reported that on the night of June 19, someone vandalized the property using spray paint and marking pens. Repainting the defaced areas will cost the center $400, according to police.

■ Over the last couple weeks, a man has allegedly been dumping trash on a public sidewalk at the 5800 block of Avila Avenue, according to a 54-year-old resident there.

■ A man in his 30s was caught shoplifting at the Safeway Stores on 10636 San Pablo Ave., according to a report.

■ On June 10 someone called a 72-year-old man and tried unsuccessfully to solicit money from him, claiming a courier would pick up the cash two days later and donate it to the "police officers press."

■ The morning of June 19, a house was robbed on 1800 Arlington Boulevard. According to police, about $21,600 worth of items, including jewelry, a computer, a stereo, cameras and cash, were stolen.

There were no suspects at the time of the report.

■ The night of June 19, someone smashed the rear window of a Custom Cruiser Oldsmobile parked on the 6900 block of Wilson Way.

■ On June 21, a man calling himself "David" allegedly called Mountain Travel on 6420 Fairmont Avenue and sexually harassed a female employee who answered the phone.

The woman suspected he was calling from a pay phone because of traffic sounds in the background.

■ On June 21 at 12:15 p.m., an ice cream parlor at 10598 San Pablo Ave. was allegedly robbed of $150.

Four Chamber members named to Economic Development Board

Four members of the Chamber of Commerce were among the six people who have already been named to serve on El Cerrito" new Economic Development Board. The seventh and final board member has yet to be selected.

Members of the business organization picked by the City Council to serve on the newly-created Economic Board include Chamber President Michael Klinger of Sunset View Cemetery and Mortuary, Chamber Director Robert Winslow of Winslow Carpet Cleaning, Ahmad Toulou-Shams of Kerr's Tax Service, and the Chamber's newest Associate Member Joseph Grossman.

Also appointed to the Economic Development Board was Ken Berndt, former local banker, city councilman, mayor, chamber manager and president and husband of Chamber Secretary Pat Berndt; as well as Christopher Todd Ruetz, former executive director of the San Francisco Opera who is currently in real estate development. Grossman and Berndt were named to the board for a three-year term, Todd Ruetz for a two-year term, and Toulou-Shams, Winslow and Klinger for one year.

According to Mayor Mark Friedman the new Economic Development Board will hold its first meeting in early July, when it is expected they will select a chairman, discuss development of a job description and selection process for Economic Development Director, and review the Economic Development Task Force's report to see what projects need to be implemented first.

Friedman estimated that the new board would probably be meeting once a month or more often until an Economic Development Director for the city is named.

Under the terms of the ordinance establishing the board, passed by the City Council in March, members are empowered to:

■ Advise the council on economic development matters, including budget, staffing levels, policies, selection criteria, project feasibility and suitability, an investment of resources into proposed projects;

■ Make recommendations on the annual economic development work plan, including its priorities and evaluation measures;

■ Oversee the work of subcommittees established to concentrate on creating plans for high-priority areas;

■ Provide input to other city boards and commissions on economic development matters;

■ Review progress toward achieving the annual work plan goals and long range economic development goals;

■ Encourage community involvement in economic development; and

■ With the advice and consent of the City Council, form a Resource Council of business and community members who are available to provide assistance on an ad hoc basis.

Local firms honored

Two Chamber members - Honda of El Cerrito at 11820 San Pablo Ave. and Marty's Motors at 10929 San Pablo Avenue - were honored by city and county officials recently for operating in "an environmentally responsible manner."

Both the El Cerrito City Council and the Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors have recognized the local firms for being part of a select group of auto repair shops in Contra Costa County designated as "Green Businesses" - firms who, despite being part of an industry laden with toxic substances, are in compliance with all environmental regulations and who also conserve resources.

The Contra Costa Green Business logo was awarded the two El Cerrito firms under a program conducted by a partnership of residents, businesses and governmental groups working to improve the environmental standards of the auto repair business.

For a list of Green Businesses in this county, call the Green Business Program at 925-646-2286.

Special Events

Chamber member Blaine J. Davis, investment representative for Edward Jones, has scheduled two special events at his new El Cerrito office during the month of July.

Davis is inviting the community to join in the festivities marking the

New Associate Members

Newest Associate Members to join the El Cerrito Chamber are Joseph and Marcia Grossman of 2333 Carquinez Ave.

Local residents for just two years, both have been very active in El Cerrito civic affairs.

Mr. Grossman, who retired as defense projects program manager for the Department of Defense after 30 years, was appointed to the city's Redevelopment Advisory Commission shortly before it went inactive. He has also served as an active member of the Economic Development Task Force, the Services for the 21st Century taskforce, and as a member of that group's Financial Review Board.

Mrs. Grossman is a member of the El Cerrito Human Relations Commission, and serves as block coordinator in the city's NEAT Program.

Before moving to El Cerrito she was president for six years of her own Human Resources Consulting business on the East Coast, where she also served as head of human resources for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

More Reinvestments

The Chamber would like to thank Summerville at El Cerrito Royale, 6510 Gladys St., and Armor Security Systems, 139 West Richmond in Point Richmond, for showing their support of this organization by reinvesting for another year.

Numerous windows fall victim to vanda

By K. Osborn
CORRESPONDENT

ALBANY — At about 1 p.m. on July 3 the manager of a restaurant on the 900 block of San Pablo Avenue reported hearing his front window breaking. When he looked up he saw two juvenile boys and assumed they had done the damage. The boys fled the area but the manager was able to identify them to officers. He then told officers that he had seen the boys hitting the glass with their hand. Upon investigation officers learned that the boys, ages 13 and 14, had not done the damage and had no evidence of injury to their hands. There were other boys in the area, but they were not identified. Police are still investigating.

■ At about 3:45 p.m. on July 3 a resident on the 400 block of Cornell Avenue reported that a tall black male had hit him in his face and then stole his gray '86 Pontiac. The thief was last seen going south on Cornell Avenue and was gone when officers arrived. Berkeley police located the car on University Avenue on July 6. They did not have anyone in custody and the owner was notified.

■ On the night of July 3 a resident on the 1100 block of Portland Avenue reported that vandals had smashed the window of his green '90 Chevy Corsica that was parked on the street. There were no witnesses.

■ On the night of July 3 a resident on the 400 block of Evelyn Avenue reported that thieves had stolen his dark blue '80 Toyota pickup with two racks on top holding two large ladders. There were no witnesses. On the morning of July 6 Richmond police reported locating the pickup. They did not have anyone in custody and the owner was notified.

■ At about 2:30 a.m. on July 4 officers stopped a green '95 Ford Taurus on the 1200 block of San Pablo Avenue for erratic driving. The driver, a 33-year-old Oakland man was found to be intoxicated. He was arrested and cited, to be held until sober.

■ On July 3, July 4 and July 5 there were several reports of people setting off fireworks in the city.

■ At about 11:45 p.m. on July 4 a resident on the 1100 block of Stannage Avenue reported observing, about five minutes prior, a white male break the window of a silver '84 Toyota van. He described the vandal as less than six feet tall wearing a reddish-orange shirt. The subject was last seen running south on Stannage Avenue and was gone when officers arrived.

■ At about 5:30 p.m. on July 5 officers responded to Terrace Park on reports of a 2-year-old child running around the park unattended while the parents were in a white Chevy pickup smoking marijuana. Officers contacted the couple and found the driver, an 18-year-old Berkeley woman, to be in possession of marijuana. She was arrested, cited and released with a Notice to Appear. The passenger, a 33-year-old Berkeley man, was found to have an outstanding Berkeley warrant for driving without a driver's license in the amount of $3,000. When officers proceeded to arrest him he fled on foot and was observed discarding a large rock of cocaine. He was caught, arrested and transported to the Berkeley jail.

■ At about 7:30 a.m. on July 6 a woman reported that within the prior 15 minutes thieves had stolen her green '85 Chevy Caprice that was parked at a tire store on the 400 block of San Pablo Avenue. There were no witnesses to the disappearance and employees at the store had not seen the car. El Cerrito police located the car at about 6:30 p.m. the same day in the El Cerrito Plaza parking lot. The woman was notified and picked up her car.

Annual street sweeping later this year

By Clare Curley
STAFF WRITER

ALBANY — Residents have an extra month this summer before the city begins monitoring parking during its annual street sweeping program.

In years past city crews broke out the cones a month earlier, starting in July and finishing up in September. This year the work is tentatively scheduled from August to October.

"In the past we were realizing the need to start later," said city administrator Daren Fields. "The summers here are longer."

The program seeks to meet the requirements of the Clean Water Act for reducing urban water pollution. The street-sweeping process removes litter, leaves, oils, grease and automotive products from every street in the city. Storm drains work more effectively afterwards, and fewer pollutants enter the storm drain system that ultimately empties into San Francisco Bay.

Ideally, sweeping leads right up to the rainy season in the fall, Fields explained. Previously, the dry weeks that followed inevitably negated some of the work that had been done. "You want to have the biggest bank for your buck," he said.

Parking will be allowed on one side of a given street while the other is being cleaned while crew members sweep up each of the city's four sweeping zones three times.

That also means that following a one-day grace period, offenders can expect a citation of at least $25.

According to Albany Police Chief Larry Murdo, notifying residents has always been tough. But, with an additional parking enforcement officer on the beat, he expects one of them to track the program.

"If a person has a particular hardship, that is taken into account," Murdo added.

City crews will place bright orange cones and signs in each street sweeping area 48 hours prior to sweeping. Crews will alternate from one side of the street to the other in a given area to allow for parking on at least one side on marked days.

One problem spot in the program is dealing with returning vacationers, who are greeted with pesky parking tickets on their windshields after being gone for two weeks.

Some suggest having the neighbors lend a hand.

Councilman Ed McManus said, "In more crowded neighborhoods like mine, we have arrangements to double up (in our driveways)." He added that things could be worse. When he moved in two decades ago, sweepers would pass by his house four times in one month.

The city's Web site offered a different alternative: "If you are planning a vacation, please leave your car keys with a neighbor or park in your driveway or garage." If you have one, that is.

Schedules and zone maps will be mailed to every Albany address prior to street sweeping.

"We're still looking at vacation schedules (of crew members) to try and work around that," said assistant city administrator Ann Ritzma.

Poll shows increased support for transportation tax

By Bonita Brewer

Alameda County voters now rank traffic as a worse problem than even education, and are more likely to approve extending an existing half-percent transportation sales tax than they were just two years ago when a similar measure failed, a new survey suggests.

"There is overwhelming support for the new Measure B," said Alex Evans of Evans/McDonough Co., a national polling firm hired by California Alliance for Jobs to conduct a telephone survey in Alameda County of 800 likely voters.

Evans said 81 percent of those polled last month said they would vote yes, or were leaning toward voting yes, on the proposed tax extension headed for November's ballot. He said even after hearing arguments against passage, 75 percent were in support — well over the two-thirds approval needed.

"The Alameda expenditure plan is up for renewal at a prime time and in a good position for the November election," Evans said. "Voters are displeased with the present transportation situation but they are pleased with the direction of the county in general. It is an economic boom period, which means voters are more likely to vote to support a measure especially if they feel the money will be used toward a problem that needs remedying."

Evans said 44 percent of respondents ranked traffic or transportation as the county's most pressing problem, compared with 35 percent who said the top dilemma is education, which two years was viewed by voters as the county's worst problem.

The poll information came as encouraging news to county transportation officials who are trying

Second grant awarded for creek restoration

...S RICHMOND section of Baxter Creek is the beneficiary of a ...ond major grant in a month.

RICHMOND — The California Department of Water Resources has awarded a $92,000 Urban Streams Restoration Program grant to Friends of Baxter Creek's umbrella organization, the Urban Creeks Council, for planning, designing, and restoring 800 feet of Baxter Creek in Richmond's Booker T. Anderson Jr. Park.

Along with $57,000 in grants from the California Coastal Conservancy and San Francisco Foundation awarded earlier this summer, this grant will help the Berkeley-based nonprofit group restore riparian and aquatic habitat at a neglected branch of Baxter Creek in southwest Richmond. Co-sponsored by the City of Richmond and FOBC, this project is supported by Assemblywoman Dion Aroner, County Supervisor John Gioia, and Richmond City Councilwoman Irma Anderson, widow of the city's first African-American mayor (for whom the park is named).

From mid-August through early October, the creek's channel will be reshaped to restore pools, riffles, and meanders. Boulders and riprap that were unsuccessfully installed decades ago to stabilize the creek's banks will be removed. Using soil bioengineering techniques, new trees and shrubs will be planted to provide shade, habitat, and forage for wildlife, prevent erosion, and filter pollution that would otherwise flow into the Bay.

"This project will demonstrate how local governments can work with community groups to revitalize their neighborhoods," said Lisa Viani, Urban Creeks Council Outreach Coordinator and co-founder of FOBC. A 700-member grassroots group, FOBC has been working for three years to preserve another stretch of the creek south of Albertson's grocery store at MacDonald and San Pablo in El Cerrito. For almost 100 years, Booker T. Anderson Jr. Park has been an important part of its Richmond neighborhood under various names. The park's play areas, athletic fields, and community center are used by a wide variety of residents.

In the 1970s and '80s, consultants hired by the city "improved" the section of Baxter Creek that flows through the park by lining its banks with boulders, pouring concrete into the creek bed, and straightening the channel. Today, little or no vegetation grows along the creek's eroding banks, the boulders have tumbled from their original locations, and the concrete is undercut.

Over the past 25 years, the science of creek restoration has made great advances. In place of riprap and concrete, both live and dead plants are now successfully used to stabilize and vegetate banks. Viani is working with teachers at nearby Stege Elementary School to develop a stewardship program for the site.

Hospital union promises 'escalated action' in contract impasse

By Joaquin McPeek
STAFF WRITER

As both sides in the Bay Area's hospital labor dispute prepared to meet Thursday with a federal mediator a union official warned that "escalated action" is likely if an agreement isn't reached.

The warning was the latest salvo in the negotiation impasse, which escalated with last week's one-day walkout involving 4,000 workers at 10 Bay Area hospitals, including Alta Bates Medical Center in Berkeley. The protest culminated with a march on the Sutter Health headquarters in San Francisco.

Job security and staffing remain issues, with workers raising layoff fears and making claims about the Sutter Health chain, which now controls both Alta Bates and Summit Medical Center in Oakland.

Both sides have made efforts to sway public opinion. Sutter Health claims on its Web site that it is being singled out for a "malicious public relations campaign" by SEIU Local 250, based in Oakland, in part to "build their membership base." The local, which represents technicians, clerical and food employees at the hospitals, opposed Summit's affiliation with Sutter and later opposed the affiliation between Summit and Alta Bates.

For its part Sutter has taken out full-page newspaper ads saying that the union local was putting patient care as a lower priority by staging the walkout.

The union has a volley of its own allegations about Sutter, and says it is the non-profit healthcare network that is putting patients second.

"Management forced this strike because they want to put profits in their pockets instead of working with employees to change health care for the better in the Bay Area," said President Sal Rosselli, Local 250 president.

There were also union claims that a disproportionate workers have suffered injuries because of what they say is understaffing.

"People don't know that this is an extremely dangerous place to work," said John Borsos, director of SEIU Local 250's hospital division. He claimed that out of 450 people represented by the union in 1999, 138 sustained work-related injuries, most of them back injuries. "When 40 percent of the employees are getting injured, something's wrong."

The union claims that the increased number of injuries, particularly back injuries, lowered the employee availability rate and led to increased workloads for remaining workers.

Boros claims that an affiliation agreement between Sutter and Summit Medical Center calls for $450 million in cuts to be made in the next 10 years, according to the Director of Local 250's Hospital Division John Borsos.

The union also points to the conclusions of a study by the The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations, an independent, non-profit organization that evaluates and accredits more than 19,500 health care organizations in the United States.

In a four-day inspection administered by JCAHO in December of 1998, Sutter's Alta Bates Medical Center received an overall score of 83, placing it in the bottom 19 percent of all hospitals surveyed.

Summit, another Sutter-owned hospital, scored an overall 77, placing it in the bottom 2 percent of hospitals in regards to areas such as management and patient and employee care.

Overall, the JCAHO gave Alta Bates an "Accreditation With Recommendations for Improvement" in one or more areas by a specified time.

Borsos believes that the strike was successful in its efforts to raise the awareness and consciousness of the public.

Alta Bates cancelled all out-patient services during the walkout and advised women in labor to call their doctors before coming to the hospital. many patients, including 29 infants, had to be transferred to other hospitals to maintain a suitable level of personal care.

Alta Bates insists that its priority remains to the patient.

"The patient comes first. Our number one responsibility is to them," said Alta Bates spokeswoman Carolyn Kemp.

Last Saturday, a bargaining council comprised of representatives from all 10 Bay Area hospitals participating in the strike, agreed to set a deadline for a contract to be made by August 1.

Borsos promised "escalated action" if an agreement had not been made with the hospitals by the set deadline.

Opinion

VIEWPOINT

Dogs and infants are an unsafe mix

By S. Seethaler

This letter is a reaction to the article about the "Fairy Dogmother" dog-walker on the front page of the Friday, July 7 edition of The Voice. When I first saw the photo and the headline I thought it was another article about a child being mauled by dogs, but the article was about a dog-walker who walks half a dozen large dogs with her infant son in tow. An accident waiting to happen.

I grew up around dogs and I love them, but even the sweetest canine can be unpredictable at times, and like people, dogs behave differently in a group then they do alone. I have a small scar on my leg from breaking up a dog-fight between two of our dogs, who until then, seemed to get along fine. I also have friends whose dogs were attacked by other dogs in the park. You have no hope of separating two frenzied animals while holding a baby.

I realize that the "Fairy Dogmother" takes at least two precautions. First, she makes sure that the dogs she is walking seem to get along with one another. This is helpful, but of course she has no control over what other dogs her group will meet up with in the park, where the presence of a new dog can throw off the social balance of the pack. She also introduces the dogs to her baby before going out with them. Still, there is no guarantee that the dogs will not get over-rambunctious out in the field because the baby starts to cry, or because they are trying to grab the ball or stick and grab the baby's arm instead. (A look at the photo shows how easy it would be for this to happen). Dogs do not necessarily understand that a baby, which smell, looks, acts and sounds different than a human adult, is not a toy and not a prey.

The number of stories about dogs mauling small children should be proof enough that this is not all paranoia and speculation. More than 4.7 million people are bitten by dogs every year. On average, each year 12 people die and one million people require medical attention as a result of dog bits. Children are the victims of 60 percent of all dog attracts, making dog bites the number one health problem in children. (This information is taken from the American Veterinary Medical Association's web site www.avma.org. This site also has good information about preventing dog bites.)

One story that has stuck with me many years, was about a small child who was torn apart by 11 rottweilers when their owner carried the child into the dog pen when she went to feed the dogs. This terrible tragedy and others like it could have been prevented by the use of some common sense.

Small children should always be supervised around pets, and both the child and the pet should be given careful instruction on how to behave around one another. Parents should keep their small children away from strange dogs, and groups of animals which cannot be safely controlled by one adult whose attentions are partially focused on the needs of a small child. Many tragedies would be avoided if people took these simple precautions.

FOR THE RECORD

Albany Vice Mayor Allan Maris reports that contrary to what was said at the city's Fourth of July celebration and reported in The Journal, Congresswoman Barbara Lee did make an appearance at the event. Lee was there early on, during the pancake breakfast, in fact, and was only for about half an hour, Marris reports. The appearance was very low-key, he says, with Lee waiting in line for breakfast with other hungry celebrants. "She's a very nice person," he says. "I just think she should get credit for being there." Duly noted.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Transportation commission plays fast and loose

The June 30 meeting of the West Contra Costa Transportation Advisory Commission (WCCTAC) provided remarkable insight as to the worsening transportation problems they are supposed to address. At that meeting, WCCTAC made what was characterized as "minor administrative changes" to the Joint Powers Agreement (JPA), basically WCCTAC's enabling constitution. The "minor administrative change" was to alter WCCTAC's voting requirement from six of its 10 participating members to just a majority of whomever happened to show up for a duly constituted meeting. Led by Councilmember Kathie Perka, the El Cerrito City Council objected to such a loose set of rules.

In response, WCCTAC Commissioner Sharon Brown of San Pablo explained that the initial "six of 10" requirement was written into the JPA "to lessen mistrust and suspicion when WCCTAC was initially formed". Fair enough. But then it was further explained that, as a practical matter, WCCTAC never adhered to the six of 10 requirement and had actually been using the majority of those present rule from the very beginning". Therefore, since the revision merely recognizes established practice it is an "administrative change".

Now let me get this straight. A rule is written to lessen suspicion and mistrust. The rule is then regularly, but quietly, disregarded. But, because no one knows about it, suspicion and mistrust are not a problem and no one objects. Since there are no objections, violating the rules becomes acceptable practice and formalizing such violations is merely an "administrative change". Brilliant.

Using this kind of logic, WCCTAC could easily solve the traffic and parking problems they are supposed to address. For example. when you are sitting in gridlock, there is no movement so there is no traffic. So the Traffic Problem is solved. Further, since you are not moving, you are essentially parked. So, the Parking Problem is solved, as well. If this kind of thinking is acceptable to you, fine. If, however, you really want movement, then consider removing some of the obstacles. (HINT: Like those who have been around so long that they really believe such thinking has merit).

El Cerrito needs more parking space

This letter is to urge El Cerrito to consider building a much-needed BART parking structure next to El Cerrito Plaza BART, as well as reduce the number of four-hour street parking zones near plaza BART.

My understanding, from a flier left on my car's windshield, is that the money for this parking structure has already been collected by the city and BART has for quite some time been urging the city to build it.

Although I was raised in El Cerrito, a city I am proud to have grown up in, I now live in Pinole. A safe BART station is nowhere near my home (Richmond is too dangerous) and so I commute to Berkeley by driving to Plaza BART and taking the train to Berkeley. Del Norte is often full as early as 7:30 a.m.; that is why so many people, such as myself, park at the Plaza.

A recent West County article implied the 1,000 who park at El Cerrito Plaza were mostly locals and that most of them could get dropped off, take the bus, or walk, thereby solving the parking problem.

I believe many of those who park at plaza are not local. Many are out-of-towners, such as I, who just can't find anywhere else to park after 7:30 a.m. Public transit going to BART from places such as the Richmond Transit Center is just too time consuming and bus schedules are not always dependable. Carpools may work well for some folks, but not everyone.

As of June 27, we have lost at least 1,000 parking spaces at the plaza. Wouldn't it be a shame and an environmental waste if even half of these 1,000 BART commuters just gave up and went back to their cars?

The addition of a parking structure to El Cerrito Plaza could also be an excellent boost for the soon-to-be-built shopping facilities going up in place of the old Emporium. BART parkers utilizing a large parking structure, even those from out of town, could go shopping there after work, which could mean added revenue for the city.

This is a very serious matter to a lot of people, in El Cerrito and neighboring cities.

Questions defense

Who is Jean Siri protecting? And why?

Her letter to the Times (June 26) says El Cerrito City Manager Gary Pokorny and other department heads quit due to "rude public abuse."

She blames me and the City Council. The fact is that a unanimous council and the Committee of the Whole found that the waiver of Pokorny's home-loan interest payment was irregular. The past council acted secretly, forgiving some $125,000 of debt. What did the city manager do to deserve this deal? No one knows.

I criticized Pokorny and Gerry Raycraft, the city's development manager, for using incorrect economic and environmental impact projections and urging consultants to produce phony numbers for redevelopment projects.

The details are a matter of public record and should have been answered by arguing facts and figures. They cannot disclaim the numbers, so they claim "rudeness."

Rather than letting Pokorny resign with appropriate praise for the good things he has done (which no one denies), Siri charges "impoliteness." As a past member of the City Council, Siri was in part responsible for his murky employment contract.

Why is she defending Pokorny? She's got plenty on her plate as an East Bay parks director given the district's financial disarray. If she did her job, many would prefer her to other currently visible candidates. Yet, rather than fixing the problem, she goes on the attack on El Cerrito matters.

She, and many local politicians, prefer decision-making based on political networking to help with their reelection, rather than on cost-effectiveness.

Our parks and local environment are too valuable to be hostage to mutual political backscratching.

Peter Loubal
El Cerrito

Make our voices heard

On National Public Radio's Morning Edition last week, Nina Tottenberg said that if the Supreme Court supports Congress, it is in effect the end of the National Public Radio (NPR), National Endowment for the Arts and the Public Broadcasting System (PBS).

PBS, NPR and the arts are facing major cutbacks in funding. In spite of the efforts of each station to reduce spending costs and streamline their services, some government officials believe that the funding currently going to these programs is too large a portion of funding for something which is seen as not worthwhile.

Currently, taxes from the general public for PBS equal $1.12 per person per year, and the National Endowment for the Arts equals $0.64 a year. A January 1995 CNN/USA Today/Gallup poll indicated that 76 percent of Americans wish to keep funding for PBS, third only to national defense and law enforcement as the most valuable programs for federal funding.

The Senate and House appropriations committees each have 13 subcommittees with jurisdiction over many programs and agencies. Each subcommittee passes its own appropriation bill. The goal each year is to have each bill signed by the beginning of the fiscal year, which is October 1.

The only way that our representatives can be aware of the base of support for PBS and funding for these types of programs is by making our voices heard. Please add your name to this list and forward it to friends who believe in what this stands for. This list will be forwarded to the President and the Vice President of the United States.

This petition is being passed around the Internet. Please add your name to it so that funding can be maintained for NPR, PBS, and the NEA.

Appreciation, publicity

I appreciated your publication of my letter on El Cerritans' historic accomplishment in getting the majority at the recent special tax election. However, my writing was so bad you though I was saying that my good neighbors in El Cerrito failed to publicize their unprecedented accomplishment.

What I really tried to do was to thank you for the support, but point to the fact that you did not publicize the victory.

As you know, only Bob Winslow and his several allies opposed the measure.

Thank you for your consideration.

Berkeley 1900

By Richard Schwartz

With country canyons and wide open spaces, Berkeley was a different place in 1900 than today. Nothing was built around Shellmound Park (Emeryville), which was the most important gathering place around. It was an oasis of entertainment linked by trains. Berkeley clubs of all kinds picnicked there. Gun clubs and horse racing were constant activities. Large day-long picnics, which included town dignitaries, were fine and frequent affairs in favorite local spots. Outdoor living was the main ingredient of weekend and summer fun and getting away was easy because country was all around.

Richard Schwartz's new book, "Berkeley 1900, Daily Life at the Turn of the Century" a snapshot of the daily life in Berkeley 100 years ago as recorded in the pages of the Berkeley Daily Gazette, is available at Berkeley bookstores.

Coming To Shell Mound.

Edward H. Goetze of San Francisco, who is in the East, writes to a friend in this city of the enthusiasm prevailing among crack shots he has met concerning the coming international shooting festival, which will be held at Shell Mound Park in 1901. He has visited New York, Brooklyn, Chicago, Indianapolis, Richmond, Va., Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Philadelphia and many other places. Everywhere he spoke of the great shooting festival and was received with the greatest enthusiasm. He has been assured that large contingents of the most noted rifle shots will visit San Francisco and participate in the great festival. Fully two hundred of the best shots of New York have signified their intention of making the journey, and they are gaining accessions to their number. They will travel in a special train. From Boston and Philadelphia large numbers will also cross the continent to attend the festival.

CELTIC UNION TO HOLD PICNIC AT SHELL MOUND

The United Irish societies composing the Celtic Union will hold their fifth annual picnic and games this year at Shell Mound Park, near Berkeley, on Admission day, Saturday, September 9th. The executive committee and officers of the Celtic Union which compose the picnic committee, outlined a program of athletic events and Irish dances, with prizes that should bring out the best talent in San Francisco and vicinity. A souvenir program will be printed, which is in charge of a special committee particularly qualified for this work. The general committee will meet every Thursday evening.

How about a 'small' People's Park?

MARTIN SNAPP
Snapp Shots

I just don't get it. Why are people demonizing Sara Jane Olson (aka Kathleen Soliah) the former Symbionese Liberation Army member who is on trial for terrorist acts allegedly committed back in the '70s?

Her backers have formed a support committee. The Berkeley Peace and Justice Commission passed a resolution asking the City Council to denounce the indictment as "vindictive prosecution" and demand that the charges be dropped. She's even got a best-selling cookbook, which she was autographing at a recent book signing/pep rally at Mama Bears bookstore in Oakland. As one supporter said, "She's been a good person for the last 20 years." (!)

The SLA weren't idealists; they were terrorists. Nobody who was active in "The Movement" can remember them ever doing the real work of politics, like planning rallies, handing out leaflets or walking picket lines.

Even before they kidnapped Patty Hearst (and systematically raped her — not exactly my notion of a revolutionary act), they made the headlines for an earlier deed: the murder of Marcus Foster.

Marcus Foster was a gifted, progressive, dedicated educator who was the first African-American superintendent of the Oakland schools. There was a lot of hope when he took over. For the first time, it seemed that Oakland's minority schoolchildren might finally get the education they deserve.

But he never got a chance to try, because he was gunned down by the SLA, who apparently decided he wasn't progressive enough. Just to make sure they did it right, they tipped the bullets with cyanide.

It was a tragedy for the Foster family and a disaster for the Oakland schools, which were sent into a tailspin from which they are only now starting to recover. In effect, the SLA cheated an entire generation of Oakland schoolchildren.

And these are the people Olson (or Soliah, or whatever) chose to associate herself with?

Look, I was in Berkeley during that time, too. And a lot of us were frustrated by racism and the Vietnam War. But we didn't go out and rape young women or shoot African-American educators with cyanide-tipped bullets.

So forgive me if I decline to join this particular parade. Donald DeFreeze (the SLA leader) was no Martin Luther King. And Sara Jane Olson is no Rosa Parks.

Meanwhile, the University of California decided last week to terminate its deal with the city of Berkeley to manage People's Park. Which means we're right back where we started, 30 years ago . I was a student, living a block away from the park at the time, and I was very involved — not just with the protests, but with the actual building of the park. My classmate, Dan Siegel, was the student body president at Cal who was indicted on trumped-up charges of inciting to riot during the park protests. (Today, he's president of the Oakland School Board.)

I'm sure Dan will agree with me when I say that building the park was one of the happiest experiences of my life, and its destruction was one of the most heartbreaking.

But in the decades since, the park has become a public nuisance, a haven for drug dealers and able-bodied young men who use it as a staging ground for their panhandling.

So what should we do with it? I have a suggestion that's so obvious, I wonder why nobody has come up with it before: namely, let's turn it into a playground for little kids.

That's where the park was heading anyway back in 1969, before it all hit the fan. We started out building the park for ourselves, but as the weeks went on we shifted to building more and more play areas for what we called "our little brothers and sisters."

Lord knows, the south campus area could really use a playground. Right now, the closest one is Totland, all the way over on Northside, which is too far for a mom to wheel a stroller.

True, there's a tiny playground at Willard Park, a few blocks further south. But it's just a patch of asphalt with a jungle gym and a few swings. And it has to share the park with other activities, including a dog run.

What I have in mind for People's Park is something much more elaborate, like Totland: grassy lawns, slides, a track with little cars to ride, play structures with nooks and crannies to climb and explore, and picnic areas for families, so moms and dads can shmooze with each other while watching the rugrats romp.

There's even more room at People's Park than at Totland, so we could get really creative. Just as in the old days, we could recruit faculty and students from the UC Berkeley School of Architecture to design some truly imaginative play areas.

We should also take a (magic) leaf from Children's Fairyland's book and institute a hard-and-fast rule: No adults admitted unless accompanied by a child. It's a good way to keep out perverts, but it's also a great way to keep drug dealers out, too.

Is this the perfect solution or what? A children's park would even benefit the homeless — if by "homeless" you mean the mothers and children who comprise the overwhelming majority of the homeless population. They're scared to death to venture anywhere near the park in its present grungy, scary condition.

And it has one more virtue: After three decades of obsessing about the past, wouldn't it be nice to turn the park into something that serves children, the walking embodiments of the future?

Stroll still seeking 'Local Legacy' nominations

Know anyone who embodies the spirit of Berkeley or Albany? Nominations are now being accepted for Local Legacies, those people who embody the aspirations and ideals of Berkeley and Albany.

The theme for this year's Solano Avenue Stroll, to be held on Sept. 10, will be "Local Legacies on Parade." Each year the Stroll itself joined a national list of "Local Legacies" in the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. and is now part of their permanent collection thanks to the nomination by Congresswoman Barbara Lee. Fittingly, the Stroll will celebrate Local Legacies in the weeks prior to the Stroll and during the parade. With Wavy Gravy as Grand Marshal, the parade promises to be chock full of fun and colorful entries. If you would like to nominate someone please write a 25-word minimum nomination. Include the name, address and telephone number of yourself and the person you are nominating, and mail it to the Solano Avenue Association, 1563 Solano Ave. #101, Berkeley, CA 94707 or e-mail it to lbullwinkl@aol.com by tomorrow. The person must be alive and residing in Berkeley, Albany, El Cerrito or Kensington. If your nomination is accepted, you get the honor of riding or walking with them in the parade! In case of more than one entry per nomination, best written nomination wins.

Music program teacher is a Renaissance woman

Community Folk

By Clara-Rae Genser

Lee McRae and I met primarily to talk about her Music Discovery Workshop: a Renaissance Day Camp, but I found the lady herself so very interesting that this must be mostly about her.

A couple of years ago my granddaughter, Janet, and I attended the Music Discovery Workshop together, and there we steeped ourselves in things Renaissance, including Janet's classes in the recorder and mine in the harpsichord (and how amazingly different is playing the harpsichord from playing the piano).

From July 17 to 21, this unusual day camp is held at the Thousand Oaks Baptist Church (on Colusa, one block from Solano) in Berkeley.

"Live in the Renaissance for a week! Sing, dance, learn how to speak "Elizabethan," play music of 16th-century England and Italy while surrounded by images of Renaissance art. We celebrate at the end of the week with a potluck Renaissance feast and entertainment for families in which our students present both a mummers' play from England and a commedia dell'arte from Italy."

The day camp is for children 8-13, with a parallel program for adults (parents, grandparents, music and classroom teachers) who are offered a "minicourse in the Renaissance." And lest we forget, for more information you are invited to contact co-directors Lee McRae, 848-5591 (LMcR@aol.com), or Dick Bagwell, 548-1205 (piperhq@home.com).

And who is the lady at the heart of all of this? Lee McRae was born in Nebraska, family moved to Seattle; she started to study at the University of Washington, but left it to work with a small international committee.

She then was secretary to Lillian Smith (author of "Strange Fruit"), who intrigued her from the moment she met her on a balcony, listening to Mozart and gazing out over the hills of Georgia.

A stint as secretary to the man who was secretary to the Cooperative League of America ended when she married, had her first child in Chicago, and came West with family, having her next three children (all with natural childbirth) in Seattle. (Natural childbirth and Self-Actualizing were important to her then.

Self-Actualizing: If you do one thing on your own, you are capable of more.)

She had an interesting period living in Bishop, Calif., in what was probably one of the first communes, where the two families built separate homes with a common living room.

But it was after moving to Berkeley that she went back to her great love, music.

A madrigal teacher in a Nebraska high school had introduced her to Elizabethan music, which she loved.

Moving to the Bay Area with her husband and four children in the mid-1950s, the family was dismayed to find the public schools here had no art, dance or music programs, which they thought were crucial to children's education.

That is when they, with a number of interested families, started the Walden School, a private, alternative elementary school that is still operating.

McRae taught at Walden for 15 years, during which time her ideas about early music education were honed.

"In order for children to learn music, or about music, they need not only to hear it — they need to sing it, to see it, and even to dance it. Getting the whole person, the whole body involved is crucial. Beyond that it's the context, the history of it that makes music meaningful to children," she said.

And she became active in the beginnings of the Bay Area's early music community, singing madrigals and playing "in a broken concert" with friends.

She was a founding member of the San Francisco Early Music Society and even found herself becoming an agent for some of the biggest names in European early music. "I booked them all over the country. And I'm sure it was the first time audiences in many of those venues had heard live performances of that caliber — which no doubt made quite an impact on their perceptions of early music," she said.

Attending the first Cazadero workshop organized by Laurette Goldberg (the Cazadero workshop is now the SFEMS Summer Baroque workshop) led to her joining with Laurette in the founding of the Board of Philharmonia and the Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra.

McRae's insistence on the need for education and outreach to the children as well as to adults led to several National Endowment for the Humanities grants, as well as state grants from California, Nevada and Arizona, and to a series of lectures and demonstrations. And these led Lee to write a "Handbook of the Renaissance," which is now in its fourth edition

McRae's writing became extensive, including resource guides and classroom units for elementary and middle-school teachers, a unit on the "Cantigas de Santa Maria" for seventh-graders, (that being the grade in which schools in California teach medieval and Renaissance history), and a series of little papers called "Bringing History Alive in the Classroom" on medieval, Renaissance and Early American music.

Two papers concerned holidays — one on Halloween and one on the winter solstice. "I thought if teachers could take early music and connect it with a holiday they would have more use for it," McRae explained.

Her Music Discovery Workshop is sponsored by the SFEMS and seems to be a culmination of McRae's absorption in matters Renaissance and her desire to teach others, children and adults, the joy of early music and that wonderful period.

Again, the Discovery Workshop is just around the corner, but there remain a few openings for both children and adults. (Adults can even receive two semester units of Continuing Education credit through SFU.) Refer to the telephone numbers and e-mail addresses above.

I was delighted to hear from Lee McRae and enjoyed our chat. Although early music is her great love, her interests are many and cover a wide area. Again, I invite your input: interesting people, events, organizations, etc. Please write to me at 555 Pierce St., #443, Albany, CA 94706 or call 525-4585. My e-mail is crgenser@aol.com.

Dealing with Mr. Big Shot

RONNIE CAPLANE

Under Construction

I got a call from the father of one of Sammy's friends. He was upset about some mischief our sons had been involved in. What happened wasn't my fault any more than it was his. But as the conversation progressed, his upset crescendoed into anger and by the end he was yelling at me.

I stewed about the conversation for a while. I felt abused, insulted, disrespected and treated unfairly.

"Jason's father called," I told Sammy and relayed the details of the conversation. I figured if nothing else, I could use this as a lesson to Sammy on how not to treat other people. "He yelled at me."

"I know," Sammy said nonchalantly and then added, "He's a big shot."

"So what?" I said immediately, regretting that I had bought into Sammy's assessment that this bully was a big shot. The guy's a successful lawyer, but that doesn't make him a big shot. "That's not how you talk to other people. Daddy's a big shot and he doesn't talk to people that way."

"I know," Sammy said.

"And what about me?" I said, driving my point home. "I don't talk to people like that and I'm a big shot."

"No you're not."

"Yes I am," I said and began listing my credentials.

The truth is, I'm not a big shot and don't want to be one. When I call someone a big shot, it's not a compliment. It usually means that the person is self-important, arrogant and insecure. The kinds of people who have to bolster themselves by intimidating others. It's like a guy I once heard about who was trying to get a seat on an overbooked flight. He was being rude and pushy and holding up everyone in line behind him. The agent at the gate kept patiently explaining that there were no seats. Finally the guy screamed at her, "Do you know who I am?" The agent studied him for a moment and then picked up her microphone and said to the crowd waiting to board the plane, "I have a man here who doesn't know who he is. If there is anyone who can help him out, would you please come up to the desk?"

Being an important person is another story. Those people know who they are, have accomplished something and don't blow a lot of hot air.

I didn't know what bothered me more: that Sammy didn't think I was a big shot or that he thought Joe was one. Either way it disturbed me that I was trying so hard to convince Sammy that I was a big shot.

"My name is in the paper once a week," I said, continuing the litany of my qualifications. "I know a lot of people. Lots of people know me."

I had come to the bottom of my curriculum vitae and waited to see if I had made the grade.

When Sammy pronounced me still "not a big shot" I asked him who else was. "Robin," he said without hesitation.

Robin is my husband's [illegible] ner and a woman. This [illegible] of information was of some [illegible] fort. At least Sammy didn't [illegible] that being a big shot was [illegible] based.

"You used to be a big [illegible] you haven't been for a [illegible] Sammy said. I tried to figure [illegible] what happened that [illegible] for my fall from grace. "[illegible] stopped being a lawyer you [illegible] stopped being a big shot," [illegible] added.

It's been 15 years since [illegible] up my briefcase in order [illegible] home with my kids. The best [illegible] part of that decision was the [illegible] prospect of no more power [illegible] lunches, no more secretaries [illegible] more business suits, no more [illegible] matic respect when I [illegible] was an attorney. But the best [illegible] no more lawsuits was a real [illegible] probably was a big shot, [illegible] love with the trappings of [illegible] ing law rather than the [illegible] of it. But it's a decision I have [illegible] never regretted. Given a choice [illegible] Sammy probably would prefer [illegible] to be a full-time mother than [illegible] shot.

"It doesn't matter," I said [illegible] Sammy. "You shouldn't yell [illegible] ple no matter who you are."

Parking lot paves way for restaurant vegetable garden

Garden's manager offers instruction monthly on growing organic produce

By Joaquin McPeek
STAFF WRITER

Located on a parking lot behind Berkeley's Santa Fe Bar and Grill is a tiny piece of the countryside, tended by local green thumb Katherine Webb.

The 32-bed urban garden covers 5,000 square feet supplies many of the herbs, vegetables, greens and edible flowers for the University Avenue restaurant as well as the Santa Fe Bistro and Cafe Centro located on Shattuck Street.

The first Monday of every month you can find Webb, the garden manager instructing some eager urban gardeners on ways to organically grow produce for their own use or for an urban market garden.

Each session gives a chance for Webb to share the most efficient ways to harvest an urban garden.

"There are a different set of resources when you live in the city," said Webb.

"What's great is that if you're creative enough, most of the resources are free."

The kinds of resources Webb uses are not exactly what grandpa back on the farm had in mind.

Whether it requires collecting sawdust from a furniture maker, visiting the local coffee house for left-over bean hulls, or gathering shredded paper from an office building, Webb has found effective ways to make compost, the base for all things to grow in a garden, from big city waste.

"I try to teach people organic techniques that they can use to maintain a successful garden," said Webb.

If the Santa Fe garden is any indication, people should listen to Webb.

Walking along the tiny rows between each bed one sees fennel, lettuce, basil, arugola and cress, all growing according to schedule, all used in the restaurant.

"The garden is so intensive, I have to amend it all the time," said Webb.

Webb looks at the urban garden training as a chance for others to help make those amendments and realize the importance of getting in touch with nature. "Reconnecting with the soil is a very humbling experience," she said. "It gets you away from being human focused and gets you back in touch with the earth."

Webb also recognizes the health benefits of urban gardening and the immediate impact it can have on gardeners.

"Besides having fresh organic food, people begin to eat seasonally which is much healthier," said Webb.

Webb's philosophy is to create a varied ecosystem for healthier living and a successful garden. "I really want to encourage diversity in a garden, making lost varieties of greens, localizing crops, and saving seeds," said Webb. "All of these things are important if you want to maintain a garden everyday of the year."

D. Mayeron, a three month veteran of the garden training, has seen the positive results from Webb's advice.

"Katherine is good at explaining how to get high production out of a small space in order to grow an intensive garden system," he said.

The Santa Fe Bar and Grill has a menu that reflects Webb's work year round. She has worked hard with the chefs to maintain a menu that mirrors the changing seasons.

"I have a signature seasonal salad mix for each time of the year, using certain herbs in the summer, or growing a certain type of green, like watercress, for the winter," said Webb.

"It's good for the customer to know that their food is fresh and harvested literally everyday."

The garden has also been Webb's tool to address the relationship between the garden and the gardener.

"There's a unique relationship between what they grow and what they eat," she said.

"It's like, "Wow, look what I did," and you want to reap the benefits of what you helped to create."

Webb, who also teaches gardening to kids in the West Oakland and Fruitvale areas of Oakland, hopes more people will learn to appreciate the finer qualities of urban gardening.

"Today's generation is total urbanized, and haven't been beaten down by nature," said Webb.

Maybe a new crop of gardeners will come with the next season.

The urban gardening training takes place the first Monday of every month. For more information: 510-841-1110.

ROCKET, AKA ARUGALA, is Santa Fe Bar and Grill owner Ahmad Behjati's favorite herb. Behjati samples the organically grown herb from one of the beds in the restaurant's garden.

That plan was approved by 58.6 percent of voters, but fell short of the two-thirds requirement, sending officials back to the drawing board. The newly proposed 20-year, $1.4 billion expenditure plan earmarks more money for transit, paratransit for the elderly and disabled, bicycle and pedestrian programs, and local street departments.

The $568.5 million for capital projects includes $165 million for a BART extension to the Warm Springs area of southern Fremont — if money for a rail connection to Santa Clara County is secured from other sources.

California Alliance for Jobs is an advocacy group for the heavy construction industry, which could benefit from the transit and highway projects funded by the proposed tax. But Monsen said the polling organization it hired "is very well known, well-respected and viewed as reliable."

"With certified personnel, you have to keep up on their credentials and leaves of absence, so there's much more tracking. Classified is much easier (to track)," Feusier said.

While Hubbard has given no indication that her move was related to the reorganization, Camp did, according to Skinner.

"Marianne's leaving was absolutely part of reorganization. She was in the process of moving back into the curriculum area, so we had already posted the business services and personnel job," she noted.

The news that Hubbard is leaving is "totally unrelated" to the reorganization, Feusier added.

Hubbard began her long stint in the district in 1978 as a counselor and moved up the ladder to positions of assistant principal, principal, director of curriculum and instruction, assistant superintendent, and most recently, with the restructuring of the district office, was given the title of deputy superintendent for educational services and certificated personnel.

Hubbard was not available for comment. But in a statement released by the Albany district she is quoted as saying, "I appreciate all of the opportunities I have had to work with the Albany schools community, especially the students. I feel like a kid who is graduating and moving on to the next phase."

According to Piedmont Unified School District personnel technician Sally Reddick, Hubbard's salary range is still being negotiated. She will step into her new position the week of Aug. 1.

A reception honoring Hubbard will take place at Albany Middle School on Thursday, Aug. 3, from 3 to 5 p.m. Teachers, students, parents, staff and community members are invited to attend.

the Whole's recommendation that there be community discussion about the Redevelopment Agency before the agency is brought out of hiatus. "I think that this dialogue is essential in generating continuing community acceptance of the Redevelopment Agency," Miller said.

City Manager Gary Pokorny pointed out that some of the goals set by the council at its May 13 goal-setting session and approved this week, such as expanded street maintenance program, are already reflected in the newly approved 2000-2001 budget.

Under the traffic and transportation heading, the council set a goal to "develop a comprehensive, integrated, city-wide transportation improvement plan." Under city operations, objectives include development of a city-wide "crime reduction plan," and development of "ways to measure customer/citizen satisfaction with (city) services and programs."

The goals also call for the implementation of the Committee of the Whole's financial management recommendations (and all other council-approved CotW recommendations).

The council also wants to assess the feasibility of creating a new City Hall building "without any new taxes or any costs to the taxpayers."

Under, economic development, the goal is to "enhance economic vitality and quality of life in El Cerrito" by increasing the number and diversity of businesses and "providing a supportive environment for the business community."

Economic development objectives include making the old El Cerrito Mill and Lumber site project "as consistent with the economic development task force goals as possible," improving the permitting process, hiring a new economic development program manager as soon as possible and to "assess the timing of taking the Redevelopment Agency out of hiatus."

Under parks and recreation, the goal is "effectively implement the projects mandated by the voters when they approved Measure A in March 2000 and to add such other projects as can be funded in the budget process."

Objectives include hiring a project manager and a design team for the swim center reconstruction project, implementing the Harding, Huber and Poinsett clubhouse accessibility projects, and evaluation of all city-owned play equipment as required by new state law and to develop a comprehensive plan with cost estimates to bring the equipment into compliance.

Several of these objectives, including implementation of the Harding, Huber and Poinsett clubhouse improvements, the play equipment evaluation, and implementation of the Canyon Trail Clubhouse reconstruction project are already in progress

..." position may, in the eyes of ...appear to be a lowly one; but ...know the work which fire-...have to do believe that it is ...-calling," Scott quoted. "Our ...endeavor is to save lives — ...of God himself. Under the impulse of such thoughts, the nobility of the occupation thrills us and stimulates us to deeds of daring, even at the supreme sacrifice."

Scott also recalled that, as a boy of 9 or 9 years old, he first grabbed onto the back bar of a 1932 White fire engine and was whisked away to adventure, and eventually, to a life's calling. "I'm living proof that we do have to grow older, but we don't have to grow up," Scott said.

Scott's wife, Cindi, was asked about all the talk about "duty" and "service" bandied about at the ceremony. "That's how he lives," Cindi Scott said of her husband. "He's a very dedicated person."

HOST INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS!

English language school in Berkeley. Our students, who range in age from 16 to 60 and hail primarily from Europe, South America and Asia, come to the U.S. to improve their English and to learn about the American way of life. Our program seeks to integrate these students into the community by placing them in homes with American families who are friendly and communicative.

Perfect for empty nesters, young families, and even singles, our program utilizes host families from all sorts of different backgrounds who enjoy learning about other cultures and teaching people about their own.

Parking

asked the stores to halt the enforcement, which they did about a week ago.

"He has no legal authority to write these tickets," Sepulveda said. "If people want to tear these tickets up and throw them out there's nothing these people can do about it."

Sepulveda said he holds the stores who hire the companies liable. "Businesses have a very legitimate concern, but there's a legal way to go about it," he said.

Target and the Walgreen's shopping complex are located across the street from the El Cerrito Del Norte BART station.

Most of the private ticketing has been at Target, whose lot is popular with BART parkers who can't find space at the BART lot.

Target hired the private parking company in early June, unaware the practice was illegal, said John Baldauf, store manager. He does not know how many tickets were issued. There is no money in it for the store.

Target has been paying the parking company, Metropolitan System Parking, a monthly fee for enforcement, and the parking company keeps any ticket money collected.

Metropolitan also enforces three parking lots in Berkeley, issuing tickets and in some cases booting or towing cars.

Target started the ticketing program because there's been a jump in BART users and car-poolers at the Target lot, Baldauf said. "It's a problem."

Baldauf attributed some of the increase to the recent closing of the El Cerrito Plaza shopping center lot to BART parkers, and some to the opening of the Giants baseball stadium in downtown San Francisco, an easy BART commute.

"I think a lot of merchants (in the area) are struggling with the same issue," Baldauf said. "I don't want the revenue from the tickets. I just want the parking lot available to my shoppers."

Baldauf said he wants to work with the city on the parking problem. "I don't know what the solution is." He added that he hasn't talked with city officials about the issue yet.

So far, no one has approached City Hall about the possibility of an ordinance allowing private parking enforcement, said Gary Pokorny, city manager.

Such ordinances are rare. Walnut Creek crafted one last year when a similar situation erupted there.

But city police have started notifying businesses that they'll enforce parking in their lots if asked, said Commander Scot Mosby. "Our position is if they want us to enforce, all they need to do is ask us." Mosby said he thinks the city police force could handle the task.

"Within the limits of what we have the ability to do," City Manager Pokorny said.

Meanwhile, Hernan Galvan, owner of Metropolitan Parking, said he believes his operations in El Cerrito were legal, except for the "no parking" signs posted at the Target lot, which don't meet state regulations.

His business in Berkeley is also legal, he said. But Margaret Lynwood, in the Berkeley city clerk's office, said she could find no ordinance allowing private parking enforcement in the city code.

Galvan said he plans to change his signs and hopes to begin ticketing again. Galvan said his attorney, Steve Turner, wrote him a letter stating his operations are legal. "I have permission from Target to charge people for illegal parking," Galvan said.

Parks

Those picked were already in the "ready-to-go stage," he said.

Eastshore State Park is slated to get $2.6 million from Prop. 12 and an additional $200,000 from the state general fund.

The money will go toward park planning, said spokesman Ned MacKay.

The district already has hired a planning consultant and soon will start holding public meetings to gather input on park features, including trails, signs and benches, MacKay said.

"Based on the information we get, we'll be able to draft a park design," he said.

Ferry Point was granted $500,000. Located near Point Richmond on the Miller-Knox Regional Shoreline, the point was the terminus of the transcontinental railroad before bridges spanned the Bay. Rail cars from the east were shipped by ferry from Ferry Point to San Francisco.

The park district plans to restore and enlarge the decrepit pier, turning it into a fishing wharf and adding interpretive historical information, MacKay said.

Tilden Park's merry-go-round, built in 1911, will receive $200,000 for restoration. The Berkeley carousel, with its hand-carved animals, is on the National Register of Historic Places.

The money isn't enough to complete these projects, but it will go a long way toward moving them forward, said Jean Siri, park district director.

"It will get us well started," said Siri, who credited the lobbying efforts of Assemblywoman Dion Aroner, D-Berkeley, for winning the funds.

A local loser in the process was money to expand the 170-acre Kennedy Grove in the El Sobrante hills. The district had asked for $2.1 million for the open space but plans to pursue future funds, MacKay said.

Other East Bay Regional Park projects throughout Contra Costa and Alameda counties receiving Prop. 12 funding include: $2 million to help build a [illegible] in Oakley; $2.2 [illegible] Regional Trail improvements; $[illegible] ditions in the Concord area; $[illegible] for a visitor's center and [illegible] cemetery restoration at [illegible] mond Historical Mine; $[illegible] $500,000 for Mt. Pardon the Errors

Due to matters beyond our control there were a number of errors in the El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce section of West County Business Today published on June 30.

In the story concerning the Edward Jones firm joining the Chamber, the name of the company's local investment representative Blaine J. Davis was incorrectly listed as Elaine Davis. The business hours for the new El Cerrito Edward Jones office were also wrong. They should have been listed at 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

In the Calendar of Events the times for the El Cerrito Plaza Tuesday and Saturday Farmers Market were incorrectly listed. The correct time should have read 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

We regret any inconvenience these errors may have caused.

Julia Morgan — lost and found

By Scott Fitzgerrell
CORRSESPONDENT

On Super Bowl Sunday 15 years ago, the owner of a home on El Cerrito Avenue in Piedmont was just settling down in front of the TV enjoying a rare day off. A well-known heart surgeon, he was not on call. His wife and three daughters had left for the day, the house was his and he was ready for the game. Then came the unexpected interruption.

At this point, we should note that the house was not just any house. The family had owned it for five years, and by now they really felt at home. This was their dream house, the house where they would raise their family — a stately, gracious home presiding serenely the over tree-lined avenue in the heart of Piedmont. Rumor had it that the famous architect Julia Morgan had designed the house, but no one could prove it, especially since she had dictated in her will that all the plans to her buildings should be burned upon her death.

All this was far from the homeowner's mind as kickoff time approached. Beer and chips at hand, he was just settling in when, surprisingly, the doorbell rang. More than a bit irritated at the interruption, he answered the door. Standing there was a middle-aged woman he had never seen before.

"Excuse me," she said, "but I'm Julia Morgan's goddaughter, and I thought you might like to look at the plans to your house before I take them to the museum."

So much for the Super Bowl. The doctor was thrilled. The mystery was solved. The plans were originals, drawn in in India ink on white linen. The mysterious visitor, the daughter of Julia Morgan's secretary, had found the plans in the basement of her mother's house, along with plans to half a dozen other homes. They had been overlooked — or perhaps spirited away — at the time of the architect's death and had lain forgotten for more than 60 years. The beautiful linen originals now reside in the Julia Morgan Museum in Santa Barbara. The family has a copy, authenticating their longtime home as a genuine Julia Morgan.

Empty nesters now, the owner and his wife are getting ready to sell. Their home's six-plus bedrooms and three and a half baths on three full levels is too much to look after now. This is understandable. The home comprises approximately 6,000 square feet on about 6/10ths of an acre.

On the first floor, the home has a large entry deck with pergola and mature plantings, beautiful entry hall with formal staircase, gracious living room with fireplace, spacious dining room, and a skylit library/sitting room.

A two-story wing was added in 1982 that includes a lovely family room on the first floor, with a second fireplace. A modern island kitchen with breakfast nook, level out to a brick patio, features oak cabinetry with clever, efficient storage and many custom touches.

On the second floor there's a huge master bedroom suite, which is the same size as the living room below. There's a third fireplace, full bath, huge office/library, a private deck overlooking the back yard, plus three additional large bedrooms and an additional full bath.

There's also a lovely skylit atrium open to the sitting room below. This space acts as a hallway library with built-in bookshelves and bay window seat.

The third level was finished out as part of the 1982 remodeling. This floor now includes a large sitting/rumpus area leading to a secluded deck with panoramic multi-bridge views, two-plus bedrooms and a full bath with skylight.

Stairs at each end give easy access to the rest of the house.

Outside, the home is truly an estate. The spacious, terraced backyard with gazebo is perfect for entertaining. Beyond it, there's a huge, secluded garden with many mature fruit trees, which is used as a vegetable and cutting garden.

A three-car garage has been added, entirely in character with the home, which includes ample storage and eight-foot high doors.

Other features include a wine cellar with built-in storage for more than 2,000 bottles. Indeed, storage abounds throughout the home, an unusual feature for the period, and more was added during remodeling. There's even a "secret" attic.

The entire yard is on a private well that feeds the automatic sprinkler system. This fine estate will be available this Sunday, July 16, offered at $2.9 million. It's truly a unique property — once lost from the Julia Morgan oeuvre, but now found.

Don't be afraid of the big bad inspector

Don't miss the Open Home Guide on page 12

Number 333 in a series of true experiences in real estate

A general inspection of a house usually takes three to four hours. The buyer and his agent walk around the property with the inspector while he looks at every part of the house and talks about what he finds.

The inspector isn't concerned with whether the house is attractive. He or she will likely to say, "What a beautiful kitchen," or "this is an excellent floor plan and so close to schools, too." His job is to acquaint the buyer with problems the house has now, things that might go wrong in the future, what it would take to upgrade the house to current building code, and to give the buyer information on home maintenance.

Usually the inspection begins on the exterior. The inspector goes up on the roof to look at the condition of the roof structure and covering, flashing, gutters and chimney.

He walks around the outside of the house looking at the foundation, drainage, siding, retaining walls, patios, railings, and so forth, all the while talking about what he sees.

He will go inside and under the house to inspect the surfaces, plumbing fixtures, electrical outlets and appliances, measure the water pressure, look inside the fireplace.

He will note the size of the hot water heater and whether it has up-to-date features such as a pressure relief valve, look at the furnace and ducts, attic insulation and door locks, tell what he can about the overall electrical service.

He will show the buyer the main shut-offs for water, gas and electricity.

It is very common for a buyer to feel overwhelmed during (and after) the inspection.

He is thinking that he chose this house and felt good about it too; he came to terms with the money it will cost, and now — wow — he's laid out flat by so many things that are wrong.

"It's a good idea to add ground fault interrupters. They've not expensive and they can save your life," says the inspector.

On and on he goes; everything he says seems to be worrisome, another thing that needs fixing or replacement, and they're all running together into one messy mass.

"Earthquake retrofitting is a prudent thing to do. You can get a bid for adding shear walls and having the foundations bolted. There is asbestos on the furnace ducts which should be removed or encapsulated.

"One of the stove burners is not lighting properly. Keeping water away from the foundation is very important. All of the downspouts should be extended. The main electrical panel has been upgraded but the sub-panel still has fuses."

The buyer is reeling. He knows nothing about sub-panels, doesn't think he wants to know, has no basis for deciding how important this fact is or how much money it would take to do something about it.

He doesn't have long to wonder though because the inspector continues to add to the list.

"Many of the windows are painted shut and some are missing ropes. Extension cords should not be strung under the house. The fireplace seems to be in good repair but there is no damper. The shower door is not safety glass.

"The roofers seem to have done a good job but they didn't seal the flashing properly. You could do this yourself; just get some roofing compound, climb up and put it on."

The buyer wonders what he was thinking when he decided to buy a house. He doesn't like heights, he has never changed a furnace filter, doesn't even know how to caulk the tub.

He intended to buy a refrigerator with his little extra money but now it seems he'll need it for a bunch of other things.

Virtually every buyer feels buried after an inspection. It is amazing what can be found when any house (even a new one) is gone over with a fine tooth comb. It is therefore imperative for the buyer to have or to gain perspective before deciding what to do next.

How about the fictitious house described above? Does it sound to you like it is a wreck? Might as well tear it down and start over?

Not at all. This house has good systems — roof, furnace, foundation, electricity. All of these expensive items are doing fine. It has good amenities — fireplace, wood floors, fresh paint. The house is not sliding down a hill, the structure is solid, and drainage isn't an issue. In spite of the laundry list of deficiencies noted, this house came through the inspection with flying colors.

Here's the deal. Houses are made up of a zillion parts. The parts get old, wear out, need care. Close inspection of this house has revealed news about some of its parts.

The trick now is to figure how this information has impacted the value of this house to this buyer.

An informed buyer will not be amazed that the house is not perfect, but he may need to gather more information on the specifics.

He may discover in the process that many items mentioned by the inspector do not have to be dealt with now — or ever.

The buyer must ask himself, "What is worrisome to me?"

Did the inspector recommend that an experienced fireplace or furnace person or engineer be consulted? Was this done? What solution has been suggested? What will it cost? What if nothing is done — what will happen?

Is it possible that the seller will help? Re-negotiation of the price is more likely when personal safety is involved (bare electrical wires, for example) than if the problem is a poor or outdated condition (no foundation bolting).

But it depends on the seller and the circumstances.

If something has been discovered during inspections that the buyer cannot live with, he can choose to withdraw from the sale unless the seller is willing to fix or compensate him for it.

We try to prepare our buyers before the inspection. We make sure that they have already read any disclosures and reports on the house made available to us.

We talk about the kinds of things that will come up during inspection, deficits that are obvious in the particular house our buyer is inspecting.

There is time before writing an offer for the buyer to decide if he is comfortable with these things and to make allowances for some others that will surely come up during the inspection.

We advise our buyers to hire an inspector who will provide a written report. We tell them to allow enough time on inspection day to ask questions, to rest up afterward before reading the written report, then to quietly think, make notes and talk to us and to others who can shed light on their concerns.

A thoughtful buyer's thinking might go like this: "The house is basically in good shape.

"Earthquakes scare me, so I'll do the retrofit work. I will also call the roofer back about the flashing. But the other things will have to wait.

"I like this house better than others I have seen. The light in the house and the privacy in the yard are great, and I'm going to go ahead and buy it."

COWGIRL TIP #3. MAKE 'EM FALL HEAD OVER HEELS.

In love with your house, that is. That's why one North Berkeley house recently got $250,000 over asking while one up the street went for just asking price. It's not just about clearing out the clutter, but more about "staging." While there are many flavors, the right staging can make a huge difference in the offers you get for your house. So if you'd like to know more about how to make Buyers fall in love with your house, do give me a call.

What seniors should know before they sell

Real Estate Forum

By Dian Hymer

When senior citizens sell

It's hard to change homes at any age. But selling and leaving the home you've occupied for decades can be especially difficult. Here's how to make the job easier.

It's difficult to let go of a home where you're surrounded with a lifetime of memories. Instead of focusing on what you're giving up, think of the positive reasons for making the move. Some seniors don't want to be a burden to their children.

They'd rather get into a situation that will give them the care they need in future years. Another good reason to leave the family home behind is to free yourself from ongoing home maintenance. It can be liberating to move into a retirement home or condominium where you can literally lock your front door and be gone for months at a time.

It's helpful to know where you plan to move, so start looking for your next home before selling the one you're in now. Seniors often want to move closer to other family members.

If this means moving a long distance, plan to visit relatives in the new community for awhile to see how you like it. You may find that you're happier staying in your present community where you can be close to old friends and to your doctors. A new location also means that you have to adjust to a new climate and to new facilities.

When you've decided where you want to go, the next step is to start preparing to sell your current home. If you have a real estate agent, ask him or her to prepare a comparative market analysis of your home to determine its approximate market value.

Be sure to chose an agent who has experience working with seniors. Like first-time buyers, seniors often haven't bought or sold property recently. You will want an agent who is patient and who has the time and the desire to guide you step-by-step through the selling process.

Some agents have a hard time being candid with sellers about what they need to do to get their home ready for sale. Select an agent who is tactful, but who will be straightforward with you about how your home should look when it goes on the market.

Sellers who start preparing their home for sale well in advance may be able to complete some improvements that will add value to the home.

Friends who've sold recently may be able to refer an agent to you if you don't already have one.

The homes that sell for the most money and in the least period of time are those that are in move-in condition. If you've been in your home for a long period of time, the decor may be out-of-date and there may be deferred maintenance.

Sellers who start preparing their home for sale well in advance may be able to complete some improvements that will add value to the home.

Those who don't have the time or resources may be better off selling their home in its present or "as is" condition. Even with an "as is" sale, you should plan to remove as much clutter from your home as possible before you sell. That way prospective buyers will be able to see the home's potential.

It's recommended that sellers leave their home while it's being shown to buyers. This can be difficult for seniors who have health problems. To reduce the stress level, move out of your current home and into your next home before selling if possible.

If you do have to be home when your home is shown, make yourself as scarce as possible so that the agents can do their job.

Oakland Heritage Alliance features Lake Merritt, African American tours

Put on your walking shoes this Saturday and Sunday and join the Oakland Heritage Alliance for a bit of Oakland history.

The OHA is offering a Saturday tour of Lake Merritt and a Sunday African American tour of downtown Oakland.

Lake Merritt and Environs

Join Bill Coburn and Linda Dziengielewski at the Camron-Stanford House, 1418 Lakeside Drive at 10 a.m. Saturday for a two-hour tour of Lake Merritt, home to the first wildlife sanctuary in the United States.

Bill and Linda will explore the lake's ecosystem and its cultural landscape with you as you walk with them from the Camron-Stanford House to the boathouse. Learn about the natural history of the lake and the urban design issues, past and present, around Oakland's prized possession.

New Era/New Politics

Stroll through downtown Oakland with Robert Haynes, Pamela Magnuson-Peddle and Annalee Allen. Meet at the Preservation Park bandstand at 13th Street and Martin Luther King Way at 2 p.m. Sunday and discover the places where African Americans have made their mark upon Oakland.

Learn the impact that the Lesartemays, Delilah Beasley, Robert Maynard, the Dellums family, Josephine Baker and others have had on Oakland and the world.

No reservation are required for either tour. Tours cost $5 for OHA members and $7 for non-members. Tours are free to anyone signing up for or renewing membership.

Tax-deductible membership is $15 for limited income, $25 for individuals and $35 for a family. Tours will be canceled in case of rain. These are two in a series of 15 tours that OHA is offering this summer. To receive a brochure about this summer's tours, call OHA at 763-9218.

Information is current as of July 11, 2000. For information on specific mortgage programs, call the lender. Rates, points and programs are subject to change and cannot be guaranteed. Points include discount and origination fees. Most quotes are for 30-day lock-ins, unless otherwise stated. Rates quoted are based on loan amounts of $125,000. Maximum conventional loan amount $252,700; jumbo loans are in excess of $252,700. Annual Percentage Rate (APR)—an interest rate reflecting the cost of a mortgage as a yearly rate. This rate is likely to be higher than the stated note rate or advertised rate on the mortgage, because it takes into account points and other credit costs. The APR allows homebuyers to compare different types of mortgages based on the annual cost for each loan. ARM–adjustable rate mortgage. LTV–loan to value. MI–mortgage insurance. NA–not available. NQ–rate not quoted. Lenders, to be listed in this paid column, call 1-800-CNS-8525. NOTICE
The Times'/ Ledger Dispatch
in cooperation with animal rescue groups, advises advertisers to always ask an adoption fee for animals Giving away pets for "Free" can put them in danger. "Free" pets can easily end up being abused. No amount of screening can prevent this Also, it is a good idea, when possible, to obtain the new owner's full name, full address & phone number. For more information, contact Tony LaRussa's Animal Rescue Foundation at 925 685-1ARF or your local pet adoption agency

Albany 9-10s on road back

IN A PLAY AT THE PLATE, Albany catcher Ben Manlove tagged out Alameda's Grahan Rodriguez. Alameda beat Albany 7-2, sending Albany into the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tourney.

ALAMEDA — The Alameda 9-10 Little League team wants to win and wants to stay home. The Albany team simply wants to get back to the island city.

The Alameda team won its second straight game last Friday afternoon at the friendly confines of Rittler Park, defeating the Albany Royals 7-2. Two days before, the Alamedans had defeated Pinole-Hercules 9-1 and Albany defeated Concord Continental 7-0 in the first round of the District 4 tournament to set up this meeting.

Albany traveled to Antioch to play Lafayette on Wednesday and Alameda played Thursday in this double-elimination tournament. Albany, by virtue of losing to Alameda, will have to play a couple of more games in Antioch before it can even hope of a trip back to Alameda.

"It has been pitching and timely hitting that got the team this far. "If we get the type of pitching we've had the last couple of games," Alameda manager Tom Pries said. "We were going to be able to stay here."

Pries started Graham Rodriguez against Albany and he is sort an anomaly at any level — a left-hander with control. He had several Albany hitters, both right and left-handed, bailing out of the batter's box as he struck out eight in three innings.

"We haven't seem many left handers, especially with his control," Albany manager Jeff Shipley said. "I thought we were getting to him in the last inning."

Albany started Tyler Bremer, the team's best pitcher, and with a little luck could have thrown some dream baseball. Instead, the second inning turned into a

ALBANY — Welcome to the land of blown opportunities or, just how many chances does a team get to win?

Apparently, in the case of the Albany Junior All-Stars, the answer is three. Having squandered two golden chances to get a lead against the East County All-Stars in a District Four International Tournament game on Monday at Memorial Field, Albany made hay when given a third chance and responded with a 5-1 victory to advance to the second round, which was played Wednesday.

This game was a lot tougher than the opener against Martinez, a four-inning 28-1 laugher last Friday that should raise some serious doubt about the Contra Costa organization's ability to field a team at this level. It did nothing but try the patience of players, officials and umpires who had to endure the three-hour-plus game.

But East County, which is primarily composed of players from Brentwood and Oakley, was a completely different story. It actually took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first when Kyle Cox hit the third pitch of the game off Albany starter Michael Clement for a double. Cox stole second and came home when David Zapf grounded a single to center.

Clement wriggled out of further trouble when Tommy Reals hit a ball to third baseman Doug Fisch, who caught Zapf in a run down for the second out. Clement walked Michael Griffith but got Steve Gehling on a called third strike to end the inning.

Albany tied the game in the bottom of the first without the benefit of a hit. Matt Ball drew a leadoff walk and went to second when Gehling, the East County starting pitcher, threw the ball away on a pickoff attempt. Robert Diaz walked and both runners advanced on a double steal. Ball scored on Ed Izumizaki's grounder to second.

The game was still 1-1 into the third when Albany got its first chance to break the game open. Steve Pressnall and Ball drew walks to leadoff the inning and Diaz singled to load the bases with none out. But Gehling bore down and froze Izumizaki with a roundhouse curve for the third strike for the first out. Gehling then got Louis Worth and Clement on swinging strikes to end the inning. No Albany runs.

In the next inning, Fisch singled with one out, stole second and went to third on a passed ball. Joey Manoleas grounded to third, and Fisch was cut down trying to score. Manoleas, safe on the fielder's choice, went to second when Pressnall walked. Both runners moved up on a wild pitch, but Gehling got Ball on a comebacker for the final out. No Albany runs again.

"At that point, I was wondering how many chances we were going to get," Albany manager Jim Giblin said. "You've got to take advantage of these situations, and we weren't doing that."

The only thing keeping Albany in the game - and it was a big thing - was that Clement was giving East County very little. Clement allowed just hit and two walks in the last six innings. East County's only threat came in the sixth when Griffith was safe on an error, stole

Walnut Creek, NOLL left in dark

WALNUT CREEK — Darkness took the upper hand in the North Oakland Senior All-Star's game against Walnut Creek on Wednesday.

With the score knotted at two after the eighth inning, the District 4 Senior League Tournament game was called at 8:28 p.m. due to darkness. It was resumed Thursday at 5 p.m. at Clayton Community Park after the Voice went to press.

It's a shame the game couldn't have been decided on Wednesday, since it produced a great pitcher's duel between North Oakland's Ethan Friedman and Walnut Creek's Jesse Marcus.

Friedman, a Berkeley High student, pitched all eight innings and fired a four-hitter with nine strikeouts. Only one of Walnut Creek's two runs were earned.

"I felt my fastball was on (in the first inning), so I thought I'd have a good game," Friedman said. "I think the curveball was working real well, and I was placing the fastball."

Marcus matched Friedman's effort, allowing just one run on four hits over seven innings. He struck out five.

"It was a great game," North Oakland manager John Law said. "I thought we both played well."

The two teams were so even that, after ending the seventh inning in a 1-1 tie, both teams scored single runs in the eighth inning to force another deadlock. Walnut Creek, designated the visiting team, took a 2-1 lead in the eighth inning on an RBI single by Marcus.

But North Oakland answered right back with a run in the bottom of the eighth. Noah Walker alertly scored from third as the relay throw from second base to first base on a double-play attempt was wild.

Albany survives last inning, 10-run rally to record win

STAFF REPORT

ALAMEDA — Tuesday evening was no time for pitchers at Encinal High School's Willie Stargell Field, as Albany-Berkeley Babe Ruth and Alameda Merchants combined for 32 runs in a Babe Ruth round robin tournament winners' bracket game.

The game, the second in the tournament for both teams, was a wild affair, as Albany-Berkeley fell behind early, roared back to take a big lead, then held on for dear life to escape with a 17-15 win.

Albany-Berkeley led 12-5 going into the seventh inning. The club proceeded to score five more runs to open a 17-5 advantage. But Alameda roared back for 10 runs in the bottom of the seventh, four of them coming on a grand slam by Kip Nelson.

Albany-Berkeley's Tim Onweller pitched effectively for 6⅓innings, but ran into trouble in the seventh. Jeremy Lebeau came in to relieve Onweller. And after Nelson's home run brought Merchants within two runs, Bryan Gross came on to record the final out.

Gross needed only one pitch to record the save, as the Merchants' final batter grounded to shortstop for a game-ending fielder's choice.

Alameda pitcher Matt McBride held Albany-Berkeley scoreless for the first three innings. Alameda, meanwhile, opened a 3-0 lead, all those runs coming in the second inning.

Albany-Berkeley finally broke through in the top of the fourth. And it broke through in a big way, scoring seven runs.

John Ball led off with a single and came home two batters later on an RBI triple by Leano Rice.

Lebeau's sacrifice fly to right scored Rice to move Albany-Berkeley within one run. After Ricardo Arias singled and Kamran Javandal was hit by a pitch, Onweller and Gross drew consecutive walks to force in the tying run.

David Collister followed with a three-run double to put Albany-Berkeley ahead to stay. By the time the inning ended, Albany-Berkeley was up 7-3.

Alameda came back with a run in the bottom of the inning. But Albany-Berkeley countered with a run of its own in the top of the fifth with the aid of an Alameda error.

Albany-Berkeley looked to put the game out of reach with four runs in the top of the sixth.

Onweller began the inning with a double and scored on a triple by Gross. Collister's sacrifice brought Gross in from third for a 10-4 advantage.

Ball added a solo home run. And before the inning ended, Joe Starkey tripled and came home two batters later on Lebeau's single.

Alameda cut its deficit to 12-5 with a run in the bottom of the sixth, only to have Albany-Berkeley seemingly put the game away in the top of the seventh.

James Assia doubled to start the uprising and scored on Onweller's two-run home run. Singles by Collister, Ball, Rice, Lebeau and Arias provided three more runs.

Alameda then threw a scare into Albany-Berkeley in the bottom of the inning, but the rally fell short, allowing Albany-Berkeley to escape with a wild win.

The El Cerrito 13-year-old Pony All-Stars stayed alive in the North Regional Tournament in Campbell with a 14-9 come-from-behind win over Mid-County on Monday.

El Cerrito overcame an 8-5 deficit with six runs in the sixth inning. El Cerrito then put the game safely in the win column with three more runs in the seventh.

Spenser Dill pitched four solid innings. Peter Collister went 4-for-5 and Chris Braxton went 2-for-4 and scored a run. David Ball, Walker Toma and Peter Collister combined to score 10 runs.

El Cerrito advanced to play the loser of the Santa Clara-Campbell game Wednesday.

On Sunday, El Cerrito split a doubleheader.

El Cerrito lost the opener, a second-round game against Santa Clara, 7-1. But on the brink of elimination in the nightcap, El Cerrito scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning for a 3-2 win over San Jose PAL. Toma started the rally with a leadoff single. Collister doubled home Toma with the tying run, and Collister eventually scored the game-winner on a Seth Fischer squeeze bunt.

Fischer's game-winning RBI gave El Cerrito its second win over San Jose PAL in the tournament. Last Thursday, El Cerrito opened tournament play with a 13-9 win over San Jose PAL.

'Year of the Tiger' in NOLL

STAFF REPORT

Baseball historians often call 1968 the "Year of the Tiger," as the Detroit Tigers won 103 games and dominated the American League before taking the World Series in seven games. The 1984 Tigers might have been even better. That year, the Tigers won 35 of their first 40 games, finished with 104 wins, then swept the league playoffs before winning the World Series in five games.

Strong pitching, solid defense and timely hitting played key roles for both those Tigers teams.

The same can be said this year for another group of North Oakland Little League Major Division Tigers. After capturing first place in the NOLL during the regular season, the Tigers added yet another stripe by beating the White Sox 4-0 for the NOLL playoff championship June 17.

Tigers pitcher Brian Dodson went the distance for his first shutout of the year, as the win advanced the Tigers to Tournament of Champions play June 24 in Concord. Dodson, who threw 86 pitches, struck out eight and walked just two.

Dodson received plenty of help in the field as third baseman Brian Manburg, shortstop Justin Hughes, second baseman Iggy Cohn and first baseman Peter Radosevich combined for eight infield outs to stifle any Whites Sox hopes.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first when Iggy Cohn walked and later scored on a passed ball. In the third, Justin Hughes walked and went to second on Alexander Weber Shapiro's single one out later Peter Radosevich walked to load the bases and, one out later, Hughes came home on a wild pitch.

Weber Shapiro and Radosevich each moved up a base on the pitch. Both came home moments later when pinch hitter Andrew Kurtz's looper fell in down the right-field line.

"Andrew had been hitting the ball well late in the season," said Tigers co-manager Ted Radosevich. "I told Andrew to just go up swinging and try to put the ball in play."

Kurtz came through perfectly, driving in two runs on the first pitch he saw.

The White Sox weren't pushovers. From the start, the Pale Hose made sure the Tigers would have to be at their best to win.

LL playoffs: Majors

White Sox	0

Sox leadoff hitter Tim Ryan singled to start the game in the top of the first. The Pale Hose had ruuners at the corners one out later when Tony Williams legged out an infield hit. But Dodson fanned the next two batters to end the inning.

Dodson settled into a groove in the second and third innings. Dodson, consistently ahead in the count, struck out two in the second before Manburg ended the inning with a fine play on a hard-hit ground ball.

In the third, Hughes and Cohn made the game look easy by turning hard-hit grounders into routine outs.

To their credit, the Sox never gave up. The Pale Hose had a pair of runners on base in the fourth when Phil McFann singled and Nachi Mehta walked with one out.

But the Tigers defense again rose to the occasion. Peter Radosevich smothered Jordan Bell's smash at first base for the second out. Dodson then fielded a bunt and threw to first to end the inning.

After Dodson retired the side in order in the fifth, the White Sox made one more attempt in the sixth.

Chris Lyons led off the inning for the Pale Hose with a towering drive to right-center that fell untouched. After Dodson struck out the next batter, Lyons attempted to go to second when a pitch got past Tigers catcher Pat Marcus.

Marcus, who called a fine game behind the plate, recovered quickly and fired a rocket to second. Shortstop Hughes caught the ball, applied the tag, and the White Sox suddenly had two out and nobody on base.

Dodson struck out the next Pale Hose batter to end the game.

Dodson hurls NOLL past Pittsburg

Brian Dodson once considered quitting baseball.

His North Oakland Little League Major Division All-Stars teammates are glad he didn't.

On Monday, Dodson's arm and bat keyed a 10-2 losers' bracket win over the Pittsburg National All-Stars in the District IV tournament.

Dodson threw a complete game while striking out 10 batters. He also helped himself with a grand slam in the top of the fifth inning.

"Brian has been struggling with the bat all through the postseason and even toward the end of the regular season," NOLL manager Mike Bauch said. "We considered pinch-hitting, but we would have had to take him out. He was pitching so well that we wanted to leave him in there."

Tournament rules allowed NOLL to pinch hit for Dodson once. NOLL used that pinch hitter in the second inning when Mike McNeill-Martinez came up for Dodson with the bases loaded.

The move worked well for NOLL, as McNeill-Martinez drove home all three runs with a double to lift NOLL to a 4-2 advantage.

NOLL led 6-2 and had loaded the bases again when Dodson's turn in the order came up in the fifth. Dodson made the most of his chance, clearing the bases with one swing.

"He was a very happy young man," said Bauch, "as were his teammates."

Dodson showed great stamina on the mound by going the distance in the 90-degree heat on the home field of the Antioch West Little League.

nightmare as Alameda took a 5-0 lead.

Rodriguez led off the second with a line single to left. Westin Moyer beat out a bunt and Jeff Murphy walked to load the bases. Oren Nelson grounded to third baseman Brandyn Adney who threw home to get Rodriguez for the first out. Will Sherratt was safe on an error that scored Moyer and Murphy.

Taylor Kees, the next batter, was safe on another error that allowed Nelson to score for 3-0. One out later, Boyd grounded to shortstop, a ball hit so slowly that both Sherratt and Kees scored. It was 5-0, Alameda.

"With a little luck, we could have been out of the inning," Shipley said, "but it didn't happen.

Albany made it 5-1 in the bottom of the third when Ben Powning, who had singled and stole second, scored on a hit by Matthew Peterson. Alameda had three hits in the fourth (singles by Kyle Krinks, Kees and a double by Pries), but didn't score as Krinks was thrown out at the plate on Pries' double.

Albany finally broke through in the sixth. Clement singled to lead off the inning and went to second when Paul Muse was hit by a pitch. Clement stole third on a extremely close play that drew a vociferous reaction from the East County fans. The safe call stood.

Then came the most interesting play of the day. Fisch hit a ball to shortstop Zapf, who flipped to second baseman Kyle Cox to start a double play. Cox caught the ball a good two feet off the bag and threw to get Fisch at first. There are "in the neighborhood" plays at second base, but this was in the suburbs. Muse was safe at second and Clement scored on the play for 2-1. Alex Peck pinch ran for Muse.

Gehling struck out Drew Remiker but walked Spencer Ingles. Ball lined a double to left that scored Peck and sent Ingles to third. Diaz blooped a single to center that scored Ingles and Ball to give Albany a 5-1 lead. Clement retired East County in order in the seventh.

BILL MANN
Media Notes

Voyeur video

Since the premiere of CBS's "Big Brother" this past week, a number of readers have been e-mailing me some strong opinions of the show and no one's been sitting here. Almost all are appalled by it, as am I. But I'm also troubled by the series. Brian Riggs of Alameda calls it "the latest example of voyeur video," with Montclair's Edie Walton terming it "disgusting — a feast for Peeping Toms."

But syndicated columnist Ellen Goodman has a thoughtful response to Walton. Writing about this five-times-a-week, manufactured-reality series about 10 people sequestered in a house built on the lot of CBS Television City in L.A., Goodman says, "You can't be a Peeping Tom at a strip show."

Everyone has an opinion about the not unsubtly named "Big Brother." Bill Press of CNN's "Crossfire," who has been sitting in on KGO Radio for Ronn Owens, called the motivation of the 10 volunteers who gave up all privacy rights isn't only the $500,000 that goes to the last one in the house. "They just want to get laid," said Press flatly, calling the group of easy-to-see exhibitionists "eight young men and women in heat." (Two are middle-aged with families from the Midwest).

There's plenty of evidence to support Press: One young stud made it a point of saying he was changing condoms into the camera- and-microphone-saturated Big Brother House. Another young woman is an "exotic dancer" who was declaiming this week about how she "really, really" liked men while flirting with the aforementioned lothario. And CBS made it a point of having one young woman from Minneapolis, Brittany, say on camera that she was a virgin.

How charming.

You can sense that this group is already scouting out the grounds to see if there's any privacy for when they "hook up," as the popular term today goes.

Aside from the low-cost show's strong sexual premise, there are more disturbing things about "Big Brother," companion piece to CBS's runaway desert-island hit, "Survivor," this summer. One of the "Survivor" crew — a young doctor — is on record as saying that if he found a reporter from the National Inquirer going through his garbage, "it would make my day." These people lust primarily for the cynical glare of celebrity, fleeting or otherwise.

And just when you think TV couldn't elevate the empty values of celebrity and materialism any more after "Survivor," it outdoes itself on "Big Brother."

The 10 "Big Brother" principals' desperate quest for celebrity and money — they've even left families and jobs for this — reminds me of my first TV column I wrote for the Oakland Trib 17 years ago. What I learned about then is just as true today. The biggest — if not the only — problem with television is that the TV industry is centered in Los Angeles, where the above values make it, I soon learned, unlivable. (Ask any of the thousands of East Bay residents who have fled here from the Southland.) As rapper and actor Steve Kravitz (whom, ironically, lives down there) once put it: "Hold a dirty ashtray to your ear, and you can hear L.A." The values that so many in L.A. relish — celebrity and material gain — translate directly into much of what you see on TV today, unfortunately. And nowhere is this more demonstrated than on "Big Brother," surely one of the most revolting shows to befoul the airwaves in years. These people are desperate to become famous, as one answers Press's question on CBS the other day when he wondered aloud why these people would leave their families and jobs. As East Bay resident and talented Chron columnist Jon Carroll said, "These people are not innocents lured by the bitch goddess of low and smarmy network executives. These are people who have seen 'Road Rules' and 'The Real World' (on MTV) and know exactly what they're getting into. They talk about the 'roles' the producers assigned to them."

There's a lot of talk about privacy issues these days. Some of it is legitimate, but some, I feel, is overdrawn: A certain loss of privacy seems inevitable in a wired, wired society. Maybe what we should be talking about instead is

'Camelot' continues at Woodminster

"Camelot," the enduring musical love story of King Arthur, Queen Guinevere and Sir Lancelot continues at theWoodminister Amphitheater this weekend starting at 8 p.m. on July 14-16.

This musical is a wonderful opportunity to introduce children to musical theater especially those who already know something of the magical story of King Arthur and Merlin the magician from the successful television mini-series "Merlin" that aired last year. Based on the book "The Once and Future King" by T. H. White this musical tells the story in lovely song of King Arthur's Camelot and the Knights of the Round Table. Chivalry, love and magic make this a beautiful way to spend a summer evening under the stars.

Woodminister Amphitheater has assembled a stellar cast for the show. In the lead role of Arthur will be Peter Kevoian, who comes to Woodminister Amphitheatre from the Los Angeles and Chicago companies of "Ragtime." Kevoian was a member of the original Broadway cast of "The Phantom of the Opera." He made his Broadway debut in the revival of "Zorba" with Anthony Quinn and Lila Kedrova.

Accepting the role of Sir Lancelot is Michael DeVries who played Sky Masterson in Woodminister Amphitheatre's production of "Guys and Dolls" during the 1999 season. DeVries has been seen on Broadway as the Baron in Tommy Tune's "Grand Hotel," Cornelius in "Hello Dolly" with Carol Channing, as Captain Lennox in "The Secret Garden" and played Gus/Growltiger in "Cats." His television credits include Law & Order and Sex and the City.

Narelle Yeo of San Francisco will play the role of Guienevere. Yeo, winner of the 2000 San Jose Opera Guild Award, has recently held the roles of Mrs. Manningham in "Gaslight" at the California Conservatory Theatre and Wanda in "Mountain Days" as part of the Willows Theatre Company. Joe Higgins of San Francisco will be playing the magician Merlin. His Bay Area credits include Cardinal Pandulph in the Shakespeare Festival production of "King John" and Gifford Pinchot in the Willows Theatre Company production of "Mountain Days." Other notable Bay Area performers appearing in this production of Camelot include Carl Danielsen of San Leandro as Mordred, Jan Hammett of Alameda as Nimue, Greg Carlson of Alameda as Pellinore and Kelly Houston of Felton as Sir Sagramore.

The suburb cast tell the story of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table with such tuneful numbers as: "How to Handle a Woman," "Camelot," "Lusty Month of May," "What Do Simple Folk Do" and "I wonder What the King is Doing Tonight." The romance of this story touched American history through the words of First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy who told Life magazine of her husband speaking the line from the play, "Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot." With those words "Camelot" became the symbol of those thousand days of the Kennedy White House.

The production staff features Jim Schlader as director, Harriet Schlader as choreographer, Richard Vetterli as musical director and Kim Vetterli as choral director. The original book and lyrics are by Alan Jay Lerner with musical arrangement by Frederick Loewe.

"A rare type of entertainment suitable for all ages," is how the show

'Scary Movie' frightful — in a bad way

By Mary F. Pols
STAFF WRITER

If you've seen the amusing trailer for "Scary Movie," consider yourself just as thoroughly entertained as someone who sat through the entire flick.

Directed by Keenan Ivory Wayans, "Scary Movie" is primarily a parody of "Scream" and "I Know What You Did Last Summer," although dribs and drabs of other movies, including "The Matrix," "The Blair Witch Project" and even "The Sixth Sense" creep in as well.

Apologies to big fans of booger jokes, but the concept of "Scary Movie" is good enough for a 15-minute comedy skit at best. Watching it to the end is like finding yourself bleary-eyed and inexplicably still tuned in to "Saturday Night Live" for the "Goodnight, everybody!" scene.

The plot, what there is of it, revolves around a group of high school students being terrorized by a serial killer, who sports the same cape and mask as the killer in "Scream" (he uses the hook from "I Know What You Did Last Summer" as a weapon).

Never mind that a parody of movies that didn't take themselves seriously in the first place seems pointless. "Scary Movie" is so greedy for laughs that anything that even has a germ of humor is bludgeoned into a big joke. You can feel Wayans' desperation for an "ah-gross!" moment along the magnitude of the hair-gel gag from last year's "There's Something About Mary." He never gets there, but he drops everything from silicon implants to fake penises into the frame trying. And for viewers who don't find those items funny, there's a steady stream of homophobic gags. "Scary Movie" is sheer raunch.

As for the cast, there's something oddly relaxing about not getting attached to any of the principal characters. Carmen Electra has the Drew Barrymore role here (she's even called Drew), and she's only in one scene, the one that made the trailer funny. Being chased by the killer while clad only in scanty underwear, she scampers through a set of sprinklers and stops for a "Baywatch" moment, running her hands along her body, flipping her luxuriant locks back and mugging for the camera. She gets points for having a good sense of humor about herself.

Our heroine is the saccharine virgin Cindy Campbell (newcomer Anna Faris), who spends half the movie dodging the killer and the rest

'Jesus' Son' avoids the trite and overly contrite

By Mary F. Pols
STAFF WRITER

In movies about junkies and drug abusers, we're used to the concept of the mighty laid low by excess. We watch the brilliant but tortured soul, drinking or shooting up or popping pills or what-have-you, and we're supposed to think, "What a waste. He could have been a doctor. Or a lawyer. Or a screenwriter."

But watching Billy Crudup play the latest in a long line of cinematic junkies in the mesmerizing and darkly funny new film "Jesus' Son" is an entirely different experience. The focus is on the kindness, the gentle goodness the world is missing out on because Crudup's character is a screwed-up drug user.

The result is a movie that actually makes you think about all the addicts out there who stumble weakly into drug use, who go along for the ride because they haven't got the gumption to do much else with their lives.

Crudup plays a young drifter known only as FH, which stands for something unprintable in a family newspaper. It's the early 1970s, and he's a dopey but endearing loser whose only talent is the affability that allows him to slip easily into groups of other drug users.

In an effective, sleepy voice-over,

New location, fundraising campaign mark milestone for MOCHA

Founded on a shoestring and a lot of vision more than 10 years ago, Oakland's Museum of Children's Art (MOCHA) has lived through the hardships of all small arts organizations: getting turned down for grants, failing to pay a small but dedicated staff, and searching for – and keeping – a building with the space needed for its exhibits and programs.

Now, after consistently proving itself successful and worthy to the community and to the schools, and never straying from its original purpose, this unique nonprofit arts education organization has reached a plateau of stability. MOCHA is moving to a newly renovated building in the heart of downtown Oakland, beginning an ambitious fundraising campaign, and expanding its board of directors.

It's a new era for a group, co-founded by two women who began their careers in the stock market and molecular biology. MOCHA struggled but earned respect for its imagination and its commitment to arts education for children of all income levels and abilities.

"MOCHA is bigger than the sum of its parts," said Mary Marx, executive director of MOCHA. "Its energy radiates beyond the museum and the schoolrooms where the children create art. Hands-on arts education enriches young people in a way that nothing else can, and the children carry the value of that experience with them forever and share it with others for the rest of their lives."

In its 11 years of existence, MOCHA has made the visual and performing arts accessible to thousands of Alameda County youth by bringing artists to schools, training teachers in the art of teaching art, and hosting field trips, after-school programs, and art camps during school holidays and summer.

Its program to train public school teachers, Discover Art, has influenced how art is taught and has encouraged art's inclusion in the cur-

Below are capsule reviews of movies playing at area theaters. The reviewers are Chuck Barney, Vera H-C Chan, Karen Hershenson and Mary Pols, Times; Ted Anthony, Robert W. Butler, Phoebe Flowers, David Germaine, Chris Hewitt, Robert Philpot, Steven Rea and Renee Rodriguez, Knight Ridder Newspapers; Hillel Italie and Christy Lemire, Associated Press; Michael Saunders, Boston Globe; Bob Heisler and John Anderson, Newsday; Anita Gates, Lawrence Van Gelder, Stephen Holden, Dave Kehr, Janet Maslin, Elvis Mitchell and A.O. Scott, New York Times; Bob Strauss and Glenn Whipp, Los Angeles Daily News; Kenneth Turan, Kevin Thomas and Charles Solomon, Los Angeles Times. Henry Sheehan, Orange County Register; Glenn Lovell, San Jose Mercury News, John Hartl, Seattle Times; Roger Ebert, Universal Press Syndicate; and Desson Howe, Washington Post.

"THE ADVENTURES OF ROCKY & BULLWINKLE": A jolly retread of the old TV cartoon (canceled in 1964), combining the animated moose and squirrel with live-action versions of Natasha (Rene Russo), Boris (Jason Alexander) and Fearless Leader (Robert De Niro). A coast-to-coast race against time to stop Fearless Leader's plan to hypnotize the world with RBTV (Really Bad Television), with newcomer Piper Perabo stealing the show as a fetching FBI agent. Funny, sly, with laughs for grown-ups as well as kids, and a lot of good-natured jolliness — R. Ebert. (PG: brief mild language.) 1 hour, 30 minutes. B

"THE BIG KAHUNA": In a hospitality suite at a convention in Wichita, three men debate questions of life, death and industrial lubricants. Kevin Spacey and Danny DeVito are old comrades, road warriors of the tool and die industry. Peter Facinelli is the new kid at his first convention. All depends on landing a key client known as the Big Kahuna. The kid talks to him — but about Jesus, not lubricants. This is heresy to the other two, whose religion is sales. Smart, funny, hard-edged, uncommonly thoughtful. — R. Ebert. (R: language.) 1 hour, 30 minutes. A-

"BIG MOMMA'S HOUSE": Martin Lawrence dons latex buns and flour-sack breasts to portray an oversized matriarch in this sometimes raunchy, sometimes sentimental comedy about undercover cops. The comedian's trash-talking style is nicely offset by Paul Giamatti ("Man on the Moon") and Nia Long, as the real Big Momma's niece. — K. Hershenson. (PG-13: language, sexual innuendo.) 1 hour, 45 minutes. C+

"BUT I'M A CHEERLEADER": A cotton-candy movie with an enticing premise that doesn't quite deliver. Natasha Lyonne plays Megan, a cheerleader whose parents suspect she's a lesbian because she eats tofu, likes Melissa Etheridge and enjoys looking at her fellow cheerleaders more than she enjoys kissing her boyfriend. They ship her off to True Directions, a sort of "rehab for homosexuals" run by Cathy Moriarty. While being instructed on feminine niceties such as vacuuming and dishwashing, Megan falls in love with a fellow patient, a nicely sulky Clea DuVall. The lesson, about learning to believe in yourself and accept the way you are, feels a little too ABC Afterschool Special to be truly effective, and after a funny start, fades away in the second half. Forgettable. — M. Pols. (R: mature subjects and sexual situations.) 1 hour, 25 minutes. C

"CHICKEN RUN": For old-fashioned lovers of claymation, this homage to "The Great Escape" from the Wallace and Gromit creators is 85 minutes of exquisite artistry. The movie, which features the vocal talents of Mel Gibson and Miranda Richardson, is about a henhouse in revolt. The simple story line should definitely appeal to younger children, and it won't distract older viewers busy appreciating the Aardman gift of breathing life into clay. — V. Chan. (G) 1 hour, 25 minutes. B+

"THE COLOR OF PARADISE": A worthy but manipulative offering from the director of the Oscar-nominated "The Children of Heaven." Set in Iran, it tells the poignant story of a boy (Mohasen Ramezani) whose father's impending marital plans impinge on their relationship. Baldly heart-tugging, the film doesn't stack up against some of the best works by Iranian directors. Nevertheless, it's a powerful experience. — K. Thomas. (PG) 1 hour, 30 minutes. B-

"DINOSAUR": Disney's wondrous fusion of computer artistry and real-life settings propels animation to the next evolutionary stage. But the story line isn't nearly as engaging as the visuals, basically about a saurian trek to the nesting grounds. The dinosaurs talk without losing their dignity, voiced by a just handful of well-known names, including Alfre Woodard. It's earnest, largely authentic and mostly gimmick-free. — K. Hershenson. (PG: intense scenes.) 1 hour 22 minutes. B

"THE DISCREET CHARM OF THE BOURGEOISIE": Don't miss this flawless 1973 rerelease from legendary director Luis Buñuel. The plot is kind of metaphysical shaggy dog story involving six highly cultivated people attempting to sit down to a civilized meal together. Their efforts are obstructed first by a simple misunderstanding — guests arrive to find their unprepared hostess in her satin dressing-gown — and then by progressively weirder occurrences involving drug smuggling, surprise military exercises and a succession of dreams. It might remind one of "The Sixth Sense," but the charm — at once elegant and wildly indiscreet — is Buñuel's alone. — A.O. Scott. (NR) 1 hour, 41 minutes. A

"EAST IS EAST": In the spirit of screwball comedy, "East is East" begins with a wedding gone wrong. But, unlike Hollywood fare, it's more interested in the people left behind when a groom-to-be flees from the altar. Om Puri stars as the patriarch of the family in this likable but disorganized film. Unfortunately, the script and its various subplots aren't developed as well as they should be. — H. Italie. (R: violence, profanity and adult situations.) 1 hour, 36 minutes. C+

"ERIN BROCKOVICH": With a name like this, it's got to be good, and between a breakthrough performance by Julia Roberts and masterful direction by Steven Soderbergh, it is indeed. Armed with an array of push-up bras and stiletto heels, the actress recounts the true-life drama of a former beauty queen who stumbles upon evidence that Pacific Gas and Electric Co. contaminated nearby drinking water. With Albert Finney as the attorney who reluctantly brings this firebrand aboard. — K. Hershenson. (R language.) 2 hours, 11 minutes. B+

"GHOST DOG: THE WAY OF THE SAMURAI": Jim Jarmusch's movie doesn't work unless you concede that the title character is insane. Then his loneliness and alienation become poignant instead of simply bizarre. Forest Whitaker stars as a professional Mafia hit man who reads "The Way of the Samurai" and gets his instructions by carrier pigeon. Some funny scenes as mobsters find out the truth about their mysterious assassin, but some of the hits (including a shot up through a lavatory drain) demand Inspector Clouseau. Weirdly intriguing. — R. Ebert. (R: strong violence and language.) 1 hour, 58 minutes. B

"GLADIATOR": Russell Crowe makes like a Roman Empire Mad Max in this epic directed by Ridley "Blade Runner" Scott. It's a throwback to the big-screen extravaganzas of yore such as "Spartacus," but with the violence amped up to fit today's pro-wrestling hordes. Crowe's performance has the most impact, as a popular general thrust into slavery by a jealous evil emperor (Joaquin Phoenix). Oliver Reed, as a jaded gladiator wrangler, died during filming. — K. Hershenson. (R: intense graphic combat.) 2 hours, 30 minutes. B

"GONE IN 60 SECONDS": The name is "Gone in 60 Seconds," and that's how long it ought to last in theaters. Jerry Bruckheimer's remake of a 1974 cult classic about top-end car thieves has a big-name cast that includes Nicolson story, set in a bathhouse in modern day Beijing.

"TIME REGAINED" (NR)
Another crack at bringing Proust's masterpeice to the screen, this time by a Chilean director, starring Catherine Deneuve and John Malkovich.

"X-MEN" (PG-13)
The comic book series comes to life with Patrick Stewart and Ian McKellen playing leaders of opposing mutant factions.

ME AND MYSELF AS A CHILD: Bruce Willis discovers that his 8-year-old self (Spencer Breslin) can teach him a lot about living in the present in "The Kid."

Chan. (PG: language and thematic elements.) 1 hour, 56 minutes. A-

"SCARY MOVIE": If you've seen the amusing trailer, consider yourself as thoroughly entertained as anyone who sits through the whole movie. Director Keenan Wayans has blended the plots and characters from teen horror flicks such as "Scream" and "I Know What You Did Last Summer" into a parody that is more stupid than funny. Tons of highly offensive jokes involving bodily functions and sexuality. The scary thing is thinking about all the 12-year-olds who are going to get a kick out of the gags, many of which are flat-out homophobic. — M. Pols. (R: sexual humor, drug use, language and violence.) D+

"SHAFT": This new version of the 1971 blaxploitation flick isn't worse than the original. The rub, though, is that in '71, the private eye Shaft was something we'd never seen before — a black hero who didn't take any guff off Whitey. John Singleton's sequel is nothing really remarkable with a thin story line and underveloped characters. Yet, the saving grace is Samuel L. Jackson, who struggles to keep us entertained amid the action. — R. Butler. (R: language, violence.) 1 hour, 38 minutes. B-

"SHANGHAI NOON": Shades of "The Frisco Kid"! This Far East-meets-Wild West version shamelessly throws in all the clichés to make it work. Jackie Chan as the Imperial guard sent to rescue kidnapped princess Lucy Liu inadvertently teams up with outlaw Owen Wilson. Chan at 46 exudes vitality; meanwhile, Wilson's independent film roots shows in his quirky, often hilarious movie. — V. Chan. (PG-13: language, some violence, pronounced cleavage.) 1 hour, 50 minutes. B

"SIEGFRIED & ROY: THE MAGIC BOX": A disappointing 3-D IMAX feature about the lives of Las Vegas magicians Siegfried and Roy. Anthony Hopkins provides the windy narration in this 40-minute feature that feels like an undernourished biography, complete with swollen music and ludicrous performances. Given the popularity of Siegfried & Roy, the reality of their performance is probably more entertaining than this 3-D cinematic illusion. — L. Van Gelder. (NR) 40 minutes. C-

"SMALL TIME CROOKS": A flat-out comedy from Woody Allen, who plays an ex-con with a screwy plan for tunneling into a bank. To cover the operation, he sets up his wife (Tracey Ullman) in a cookie shop in the storefront above the tunnel, and the cookies take off big-time. Rich beyond her dreams, Ullman hires Hugh Grant to give her lessons in culture, and he flatters his way into grabbing distance of her fortune. Elaine May plays Ullman's cousin, who comforts Woody with simple pleasures while Ullman rockets into the lowest reaches of the social stratosphere. — R. Ebert. (PG: language.) 1 hour, 35 minutes. B

"SUNSHINE": Three generations of a Hungarian Jewish family live through, and sometimes die because of, a century of persecution. Ralph Fiennes is impressive in a triple role, as a turn-of-the-century Budapest manufacturer who wants to stand for Parliament; his son, who wins a gold medal in the Olympics and converts to Catholicism; and his grandson, who finds a position in the postwar communist regime. All want, in their own way, to be a "good Hungarian," and all, in one way or another, are defeated by a series of totalitarian regimes. True historical sweep in a thoughtful film by Istvan Szabo. — R. Ebert. (R: strong sexuality and violence, language and nudity.) 3 hours. B

"TITAN A.E.": An engaging, technically magnificent piece of computer-age animation that delivers the mix of punch and pathos that modern moviegoers have come to expect from action yarns. It even has a positive — and yes, subtle —message buried within it. It begins with one massive explosion, and ends with another. In between, as in the case of classic science fiction such as the "Star Wars" series, the fate of humanity hangs in the balance. Matt Damon voices the unlikely hero of the tale, a cynical young man who holds the key to saving humanity. — T. Anthony. (PG: action violence, mild sensuality, brief language.) 1 hour, 32 minutes. A-

"TRIXIE": This endurance test disguised a detective move spoof finds Emily Watson playing a security guard who, despite evident mental limitations, is determined to prove herself as a private eye. Trixie encounters suspicious characters on her new assignment at a casino, including a politician (Nick Nolte), a klutzy lady-killer (Dermot Mulroney), an ex-con entertainer (Nathan Lane) and various other sorts. Everything about the movie — the comic timing, the plot structure, the basic premise — is so off that not all the talent in the world can set it on the right track. — B. Strauss. (R: sex, nudity, language, violence.) 1 hour, 57 minutes. D

"U-571": Rife with every drippy, miserable, claustrophobic, melodramatic moment that marks this overworked genre. Sub-movie lovers will be in hog heaven, but others may find little that's intellectually buoyant. Despite the hype, Matthew McConaughey does little to advance his troubled career as a World War II naval officer heading a dangerous mission to overtake a German U-boat and steal its precious coding device. The boat floats from one harrowing episode to another, with knockout special effects. — K. Hershenson. (PG-13: war violence.) 1 hour, 56 minutes. C+

"UP AT THE VILLA": Kristin Scott Thomas is smashing as a penniless British widow who is a guest at the Florence villa of a princess (Anne Bancroft). Within a few days, she is proposed to by a British diplomat (James Fox), propositioned by an American millionaire (Sean Penn), and makes love to a hapless refugee (Jeremy Davies). All of these threads come together in a final conversation in which scandal, while it cannot be denied, need not disrupt good manners. It's the kind of movie that makes you happy you're watching it and not in it, because you would never know how to converse with people of such style. — R. Ebert. (PG-13: thematic elements.) 1 hour, 55 minutes. B

I've been to the Web site — www.bigbrother2000.com — several times this week, and the cameras and mikes are turned on 24/7. This doesn't seem to bother these people much — and why should it? As noted above, these people not only knew exactly what they were getting in to, they love the attention. And Hollywood, of course, has always been a magnet for such sad people.

You get your choice on the Net of four live video "feeds." I wandered into the netcast one day this week as our exhibitionistic "family" was playing the old "dead — or alive" celebrity game. What I saw and heard was a lot funnier than most TV sitcoms. A sampler:"Mel Torme" "He's dead?" "Jackie Gleason" "He was in 'Smokey and The Bandit.'" "Anwar Sadat"(Group silence. No recognition of name. Note: One member of this group works for the UN in New York). "Spiro Agnew" "You shouldn't just say their name. You should say what they do." "Barbara Jordan" "First black Senator, from Illinois, I think." "Idi Amin" "He ate people, and was killed." "George Patton" (Silence again) "King Hussein" "He died a couple of years ago." "Milton Berle" "Old TV guy. He died."

Ellen Goodman notes a final disturbing aspect of this show: "As an antidote for a loss of community, we create false communities." The Big Brother FAMILY is what CBS calls these 10 people — Goodman terms it "a temporary, uncommitted band of strangers held together by four walls, 60 microphones, and the lure of $500,000."

A few months ago, Fortune magazine ran a thought-provoking piece surprisingly critical (for a business publication) of high-tech companies who routinely try to make the workplace into their employees' "communities" by sponsoring group activities, common meals and such. Since so many of them spend so much time at their offices — often sleeping and eating all their meals there — and aren't in their own neighborhoods or houses much, it's not suprising productivity-minded businesses would also try to redefine "community."

And, having once briefly lived in L.A., where most of my neighbors had no idea who was living next door, the idea — and actual practice — of community has been a joke for years. The traditional meaning and practice of community is on the critical list these days, and it's now being redefined for self-serving reasons by mass media and big corporations. Actual communities are in as short supply — like dignity.

And while there may be a place to see strangers who aren't shallow and exhibitionistic, it sure won't be in the popular media. Your weekend homework assignment: Find one shot on any TV channel that shows someone actually reading a book.

Hair Yesterday, Hair Tomorrow: Yes, it's true. Sheeee's back! That would be well-dressed humanoid and ousted KGO-TV anchor Terilyn "Big Hair" Joe. After several months of watching the job offers flood in up in Canada, T.J. returns and begins anchoring on San Jose's Channel 11 in October. Wish I could have ended with a more upbeat item today.

of it dodging her boyfriend, Bobby, who follows her around saying "Just touch it." She's supposed to be a cross between Neve Campbell and Jennifer Love Hewitt, but Faris has more of a Christina Ricci quality. She's got an interesting face, a wry little mouth and a capability for comedy. Here's hoping she finds a better role next time.

Shannon Elizabeth (of "American Pie") drops by to model a swimsuit and flash her cleavage. Marlon Wayans plays the classic stoner of high school movies without adding anything to the stereotype. Cheri Oteri's one-note stridence works well for her role as TV news reporter Gail Hailstorm, but her "Blair Witch Project" scene is so gross it will make you gag.

The parody of the David Arquette character from "Scream" is perhaps the most effective. As Doofy, David Sheridan channels all that is unpleasant about Arquette (although it may only work on those who wince when Arquette's telephone company ads appear on their televisions). Seeing him stuffed into a synthetic police uniform, drooling, his face contorted into a hideous grimace, is good enough for a few hearty laughs.

But by the time Doofy announces he's pooped in his pants, those laughs are a faint memory. All the clever bits in this movie are quickly overwhelmed by an onslaught of gross jokes dealing with bodily functions and sexuality. It's hard to say which is the worst, although a running joke about a character named Ray (Shawn Wayans), who is gay but doesn't know it, is definitely in the running for most tasteless

Twelve-year-old boys who've dodged the much-deserved R rating will probably giggle every time Ray makes a butt joke. That's the truly scary part of "Scary Movie."

ricula of the Oakland, Berkeley, Hayward and Alameda school districts.

MOCHA also runs an Artists-in-Residence program at Children's Hospital Oakland providing children in the oncology and hematology departments both group and one-on-one art experiences.

"Creating A Place for Children to Create," a $750,000 fundraising campaign, has been launched to help pay for MOCHA's move this month to the historic Swan's Marketplace in Old Oakland and to sustain MOCHA programs.

Money raised during the three-year campaign will be used to pay for the renovation of MOCHA's site and to begin an endowment.

The new MOCHA will include a gallery to exhibit children's art from local schools as well as from around the world, a digital art studio, and visual and performing arts spaces.

"It is fitting that the Museum of Children's Art is part of the renaissance of downtown." said Oakland Mayor Jerry Brown. "MOCHA contributes enormously to Oakland's dynamic culture."

Jesus

FH fills us in on the patchwork of his life, bouncing back and forth in time the way an imperfect storyteller does. Some will doubtless be annoyed by this fractured narrative, but within the weird context of the movie, it works. Director Alison Maclean took this approach to be true to the source material, Denis Johnson's short story collection "Jesus' Son" (the title came from a line in the Velvet Underground song "Heroin").

Early on, FH meets sexy Michelle (Samantha Morton of "Sweet and Lowdown"), who sleeps with him and then shoots up over breakfast. He's getting the cereal, she's tying off her arm. (Maclean is thankfully restrained in these shooting-up scenes: only one big ugly vein close-up.) The way he gawks, we assume he is a newcomer to the drug. But it's not long before he's joining her, and they're living the typical drug-addict life in cheap hotels and crash pads, begging, borrowing and stealing to feed their habit.

Still, FH holds onto that essential gentleness, never treading into that typical movie script now-I'm-a-violent-junkie territory. There's a scene where he and his friend Wayne (Denis Leary, in a chillingly sad performance) go into an empty house to do some "salvage" to make money to buy more drugs. Since the house is empty, it doesn't look like there's anything to take. But Wayne digs right into the Sheetrock, intent on pulling out every bit of wiring in the house.

Like us, FH winces at the impact, and everything we need to know about him is in that look. It's apparent he doesn't really belong in this kind of rough, ugly life. He's a follower, not a leader. Furthermore, he's innocently thrilled at the hard day's work he and Wayne put in. "Forty dollars," he crows. "Each!"

When Michelle gets pregnant, FH tries his best to reform and become responsible. He gets a job in a hospital emergency room — one you'd never want to visit — where he merrily pops pills with an orderly named Georgie (Jack Black). Black, who looks like a wild, troubled Muppet, almost stole "High Fidelity" from John Cusack. He does the same hilarious shtick here, evoking an early Robin Williams. It's incredibly engaging, but you wonder how sustainable it is, even while you're giggling helplessly.

By all rights, the beautiful Crudup (last seen in the good but strange "Waking the Dead") with his high cheekbones and fine features, shouldn't be able to slip into this kind of role. But he does, putting it on as easily as the worn down jacket he wears for most of the movie. Even his posture as FH is hesitant, entirely lacking in bravado. When he scrabbles around on a bed in ugly underwear, it feels like we're spying on someone real, not watching a movie star sacrifice a day in Armani for his art. He never tries to make FH a dreamy hero, and that gives the movie strength.

"Jesus' Son" is absolutely soaked in the '70s. It's not just the dead-on clothes or the beat-up green VW Beetle FH drives, it's something about the atmosphere. Maclean and director of photography Adam Kimmel have worked some magic. There are some beautiful scenes, most of them involving drug-produced hallucinations. In one, FH and Georgie are wandering around what appears to be a graveyard, and FH thinks he sees Michelle's face drop out of the sky. He falls to his knees, blissfully unaware he's at a drive-in movie and that's an actress on the screen, not Michelle. It's lovely.

Despite the stupid, mindless things FH does, there's a subtle poetry in his drug babble. "I feel the tang of the evergreens stabbing me," he shouts during his romp in the woods with Georgie. This isn't "Permanent Midnight," where Ben Stiller shoved his manic brilliance down our throats. FH's true potential lies in how he approaches the world, with joy.

When he goes into rehab at one point, we see him shaving another patient (played by Dennis Hopper), and we're in on the pleasure he takes in the careful strokes of the razor. It's like the "salvage" job he did with Wayne, and he's grateful for work, for having any purpose. FH's discovery of those simple pleasures is what makes this a uniquely touching story of salvation.

"Jesus' Son" doesn't have the twisted glamour of a bender-bound Nicolas Cage throwing booze in a shopping cart. Thank heavens, because its message about the importance of living a good and perhaps even quiet life within the small parameters most of us actually have is far more provocative. Redemption in this movie isn't about coming back from the depths of despair to climb the heights, but rather to live in the everyday world.

Art deco reigns at Paramount Theatre

At the time the Oakland Paramount was created, an entirely new style of design was evolving. The term "Art Deco" was first used in the mid-1920's to describe the works typical of the leading artists, designers and mastercraftsmen, which were displayed in the famous Exposition International des Arts Decoratifs et Industriels Modernes, held in Paris in 1925.

Art Deco was a revolutionary style of design that appealed to the intellect as well as aesthetics and was characterized as an attempt to unite arts with industry. Angular geometric shapes, clear bright colors, unusual surface treatments, rare and often exotic materials, refined detailing, and superb craftsmanship were typical of the Art Deco, or Modern style. The Paramount showcases typical Art Deco motifs including flowers, plants, animals and geometric shapes.

The design of the Egyptian ladies in the Grand Lobby may have been influenced by the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb in 1923.

The Oakland Paramount is considered the best example of Art Deco theatre architecture in the entire country, equaled only by New York's Radio City Music Hall.

Finding homes for cats is just the beginning

The Island Cat Resources and Adoption, a grass roots, all volunteer group was formed five years ago to help unowned and feral cats. They currently have 95 wonderful adoptable cats available.

Featured on this page is Isaac, a playful, polite and beautifully marked 3-year old boy who loves to nap in warm places, have his coat brushed, and rest in a loving lap. He was abandoned and lived outside for several months and wants a home life again. Isaac is FIV+ and nonsymptomatic. Therefore, Isaac needs an indoor only home, a cat friendly dog or a home where he can be the only pet. Isaac comes with good humor, a cat carrier, and several other goodies.

ICRA is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization based in Alameda, California funded solely by donations that allow them to provide:

• Cat welfare and education outreach

• An ongoing foster and adoption program (ICRA does not have a shelter, they rely on volunteer foster homes.)

• Careful screening of all potential adopters, follow up, and the requirements that the cat be returned to ICRA if the adopter is not able to keep it, for any reason.

• An active strong program of spaying and neutering of all cats (owned, unowned or feral) by: (1) Offering help including pick up and taking cat to vet; (2) Arranging for low-income financial assistance for spay/neuters

In five years they have placed 765 cats in responsible homes and provided spay neuter services to over 3000 cats.

For additional information on any of these wonderful cats or to volunteer your time, call Island Cat Resources and Adoption president Merry Bates, at (510) 869-2584 or visit their website at www.icraeastbay.org

HILLS NEWSPAPERS'

Adopt-a-Pet

Because each life counts...help us make a difference.

New Berkeley feline facility

On June 26, the Berkeley Humane Society unveiled a completely renovated feline adoption facility. This modernized facility almost doubles the Humane Society's capacity for housing available cats and employs features that help prevent the spread of infections normally associated with the institutional housing of animals.

The new modern facility has five attractive rooms, each with its own air exchange system for disease prevention. Each room can hold from six to eight cats or litters of kittens. The cats are shown in areas each with a sink to promote good hygiene among staff, volunteers and kitty shoppers. Soon, the walls will be painted with murals depicting the beauty of pets and the natural world. The next phase of construction will be to create two visiting suites that will allow potential adopters to interact with their future cats in a homelike setting.

The Berkeley Humane Society is located at 2700 9th Street at Carleton. Hours are 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. on weekdays, 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturdays.

4th Annual Growl, Meow, and Wine Gourmet Celebration

On Sunday, July 23 from 1 to 4 p.m., the Oakland SPCA will host the 4th Annual Growl, Meow, and Wine Gourmet Celebration. They are seeking food, wine, raffle and auction donations, and volunteers to help pick up donations, set up the tables, serve food, and clean up. If you are interested in helping, please contact Volunteer Program manager Rachel Martin at 510-563-4626 or email RMartin@ eastbayspca.org.

2001 Audi TT Roadster: a name to remember

Keene on Wheels

By Tom Keene

When it comes to name-dropping, Audi is totally innocent. Nowhere on the 2001 TT Roadster is the manufacturer's name. Identity is simply Audi's four interlocking rings.

Another thing not seen on this open-top roadster is the excitement that results from the turbocharged engine, especially when driving under an open sky. A simple twist of the wrist is all it takes to latch or unlatch the canvas from the top of the windshield; then the top is powered down. TT seats only two and the trunk is not very spacious, but what this car lacks in capacity, it more than makes up for in performance.

Under the hood is a 225-horsepower, four-cylinder, five-valve engine that does zero to 60 mph in under seven seconds. There are faster cars, but these seven seconds are thrilling — if everything clicks right.

The TT has a six-speed manual transmission. The gear track is tight and I frequently got hung up while shifting up the line. I'm sure I'd get the hang of this shifter with more practice, but I only had the car for what seemed too brief a week. The same thing applied to downshifting. I'd sometimes go from 6th to 4th gear and end up in 2nd by mistake due to the

Drive, She Said

By Denise McCluggage

How's my driving? Call 1-800 TURN ME IN

"How's my driving?"

That's a question asked on bumpers and rear decks of trucks and cars everywhere. A phone number invites judges-at-large to call in an opinion

I've wondered if callers were meant to respond with letter grades, say a C+ on left turns, D for braking too harshly and a B- for excessive use of horn. Or maybe Olympic style judging. A six because of that slight bobble on parallel parking.

For all the phone numbers I've seen, I've never called one, although I would tight gate. Nevertheless, shifting and accelerating are all part of the fun, so, I spent as much time behind the wheel as I could — just for sheer enjoyment.

With the top down, the TT is an eye-grabber in a few areas. The two-sided fully galvanized body with an aluminum hood is short, and the designers used smooth, oval lines.

The 17-inch, five-spoke wheels help in grabbing attention. One observer described the TT as cute, but that adjective is almost sacrilegious in describing this tiny powerhouse.

Another feature that grabs attention when the top is down is the seats: baseball-optic leather seat covers similar in appearance to a catcher's mitt. This is a $1,000 option. My tester even included the $450 heated seats.

Other options on my TT were $500 high-intensity Xenon headlights and a Bose premium sound system with a six-disc changer. This system, adding $1,200 to the total, has four speakers in the doors and two rear speakers. But just listening to this sound system made the total price of $42,725 seem mellow.

Two roll bars located just behind the seats increased the car's safety, and seemed to make me a more secure feeling when viewing the TT from a distance. Adding to the car's attractiveness, as well as its performance, is a small stabilizer bar on the rear deck.

Quattro is a feature that whatchamacallit is noted for in many of its vehicles, plus an anti-slip regulator. This is a permanent, full-time, all-wheel drive system that helps keep the roadster on track should a driver suddenly encounter a slippery surface. This car includes the "next generation" airbag supplemental restraint system and head side airbags. Three-point safety belts include automatic pretensioners.

The TT is loaded with luxurious appointments going beyond the hard-to-reach dual cupholders. The Nappa leather and the tilt telescopic steering column add to the comfort, and the seats include height adjustments.

The driver information displays contain information such as the outside temperature, plus a five-function trip computer: a unit that checks the operating systems of the entire car.

Name-dropping for this roadster has been avoided by the people with the four-ring emblem. So this TT is perfect for anyone who would like to be a name-dropper without appearing ostentatious.

Complete explanation of problem helps your mechanic

Owners Auto Know

By Don Chaikin

If you're not a well-skilled, knowledgeable and confident do-it-yourself mechanic, you're going to have to take your car or truck to a pro for repairs or service.

But even when the nature of the repair is well beyond your abilities, you can still do several pre-repair tasks that will help ensure that whoever you pay to fix it does a good job, the first time out.

It's critical that you are able to fully and intelligently describe the symptoms of your vehicle's ailment to your mechanic.

All late-model cars and trucks are equipped with sophisticated self-diagnostic capabilities. However, these systems don't cover all parts of your car. And even models that are only a few years old don't have such thorough self-diagnostics.

To aid your mechanic, supply him with a detailed history of the problem — otherwise he might treat only the symptom, and not the cause. Before you know it, you're back with the same complaint, and both you and the mechanic are not going to be happy about the situation.

There will be some problems that are so catastrophic that you'll have no history or symptoms to report. It just stopped running. Or, it simply won't start. However, most problems do develop gradually.

In fact, the time between when an ailment appears and the time when it does become crippling can be several weeks and hundred of miles of driving. In these cases, it's imperative that you — as well as anyone else who drives your car or truck — pay careful attention to any changes in the vehicle's performance.

You should be alert for any differences from the norm — even the slightest degradation in handling, acceleration... And pay particular attention to new or strange noises...

Drive Safely

Driving

have flunked a few drivers for abrupt lane changes. By asking around, I turned up one person who admitted actually calling one of the numbers. "Nobody answered," he said.

So much for my brief and totally worthless survey on How's-My-Driving numbers. Granted, my experience may not be that of others. And a new company hoping to make the roads safer by having observers drop a dime on drivers behaving badly has taken up the banner.

This is Drive Watch, based in Albuquerque, NM, created by Matthew Beechhold and William Smith. What makes Drive Watch unique is that it is designed to alert parents to poor or erratic driving by their youngsters.

(Or their oldsters, for that matter, what with their aging parents heading the wrong way on one-way streets or accelerating through florist shop windows in increasing numbers.)

Beechhold, a former teacher in Princeton, N.J., was moved to create Drive Watch after two of his most promising students were killed in a car crash. He thought that informed intervention on the parents' part early on might have brought about better driving habits and avoided the accident.

The question asked on the Drive Watch bumper stickers is: "Am I driving safely?" with the number 800/295-2148. Anyone with a negative view of the way the bearer of the bumper sticker is behaving can either call or e-mail an answer.

The Web site is www.drivewatch.com <http://www.drivewatch.com>. (New subscribers can sign up for service there, too.)

And no, the Drive Watch people don't want the dime droppers to use their cell phone while underway to make their reports. "That's dangerous driving, too."

Reported infractions and unwise motor moves are immediately reported to the parents by e-mail. And a log is kept which is always accessible (encrypted) online. The information, by the way, is not reported to insurance companies.

It is only for the party paying for the service. (The cost is $39.95 a year.) Drive Watch is, however, investigating the possibility of insurance companies giving sticker bearers a break on their premiums.

What about nuisance calls? The report takers are trained to ferret out the facts and to get beyond the eyes of the beholder. How effective are such programs?

The Drive Watch people hope that the presence of the bumper sticker alone will prompt road decorum and quash any urges to squeal tires around corners or give short shrift to stop signs.

"We hope we never get any reports," Beechhold says. "The whole idea is if the kid even has his sticker he's not going to go out there and drive aggressively."

Would a bumper sticker quell your teen's tomfoolery? I asked a few backward-baseball cap wearers with clown pants at half-staff who were definitely teenagers and were license-bearing drivers.

How would they like their parents to get a report on how they drove when they were out and about in the family car? The response was terse and predictably unfavorable.

"Who'd tell 'em?" one asked. I explained about the bumper stickers and the 800 number. "Do the stickers come off easy? I'd just peel it off and put it back on."

Another said he would drive around the corner, duct tape over it while he had the car and remove it before he went home. I left them debating whether duct tape would damage the sticker and reveal the ploy. "Hey, I'd report you for taping."

I checked with some other young drivers. Several said they wouldn't mind. "My folks give me check drives all the time anyway," said one girl, sounding more proud of the attention than put upon.

Another said she thought it was a good idea: "I'd like to have a report on my Mom. She's always hitting curbs when she turns."

Drive Watch is also set up for fleet owners to gather reports on their drivers. Maybe the working drivers would be more tractable than the kids. Or less enterprising.

MOTOR MATTERS

A SILKY SMOOTH 353-CUBIC-INCH, 115-HORSEPOWER V8 engine — that purrs virtually in silence — powers this superb 17-foot-long 1932 Cadillac

This Caddy may have been in pictures

Classic Classics

By Verne Parker

After a career in the military, Jim George returned to the farm where he had grown up. With a patience that seems inherent in farmers, George thought long and hard before finally deciding to get an antique car.

"I'm a GM man," says the country farmer, narrowing his choice somewhat. After looking at literally thousands of pictures of antique cars, he decided he couldn't go wrong with anything from 1932. "I just like the looks of 1932 cars," says Jim George. Additionally, his dream car had to be a convertible coupe. If the top didn't go down, he didn't want it.

After more than a year of chasing down misleading disappointments, George found a 1932 Cadillac convertible coupe for sale by a dealer in Canada. He was told the car's history, which started with its delivery to the Don Lee, Inc. dealership in Los Angeles, where it reportedly was purchased by a movie studio. The studio owned the car 29 years, and somewhere along that line there may have been some connection to actor Clark Gable.

From 1961 to 1998 an Ohio antique automobile collector owned the 17-foot-long Cadillac before selling it to the Canadian dealer, who then turned it around for a quick profit. After examining pictures of the car and hearing it described over the telephone, George engaged in several months of negotiations.

The deal agreed upon was that in January 1999, the car would be trucked to Virginia and, if the Cadillac was as advertised, there would be a sale.

In January, Jim George watched as the green Cadillac with its black fenders was unloaded and the 353-cubic-inch, 115-horsepower V8 engine was fired up. The motor was silky smooth, running virtually in silence. A six-volt battery in a compartment behind the right side mount provided the juice to start the car, while a 2-inch updraft carburetor fed fuel to the big engine.

George carefully drove the Cadillac over his grease pit, where he examined the parts of the car not normally visible. "The prettiest part of the car," he said, "is the underneath part of it."

The 4,675-pound Cadillac came equipped with dual side-mounted spare tires with metal shrouds, a chrome-plated goddess radiator cap ornament and a pair of Trippe lights.

Cadillac

After the inspection George said, "I found the car better than advertised in some ways and not as good in others." By and large the car was satisfactory; the deal was sealed.

Mr. George changed all the fluids including those in the 30-gallon gasoline tank and the 26-quart cooling system and put eight quarts of oil in the crankcase. The long car rides on a 134-inch wheelbase supported by 7.00x17-inch white sidewall tires mounted on yellow wire wheels with 40 spokes each.

A number of firsts occurred on the 1932 Cadillac. The instrument cluster was moved from the center of the dashboard to the left in front of the driver. To make the gauges more visible, Cadillac dropped one of the four spokes in the steering wheel.

The two large instruments anchoring either end of the instrument cluster are the clock, at left, and the 110-mph speedometer on the right. To the left of the centrally located temperature gauge are the gasoline gauge, top, and the ride regulator, bottom. To the right of the temperature gauge are the ampere meter, top, and oil pressure gauge, bottom.

Above the walnut dashboard each wiper has its own control. Sprouting from the floor is not only the gearshift lever, but the hand brake as well. In the center of the dashboard in a vertical progression are from the top: lighter, throttle, choke and ignition.

After the ignition switch is turned on, the starter is pressed with the driver's right toe as the accelerator is operated with the heel. Jim George will have no exhaust worries since the exhaust system was replaced.

A pair of gracefully curved landau bars stand ready to help lower the fabric top. George has not attempted to lower it since he's unsure of the age of the fabric, causing him concern that it could be damaged by such action.

The rear window is glass, and the fabric panel holding it is secured by seven snaps. While driving with the top raised, George can leave the rear window panel open to ease communication with any rumble seat passengers.

While driving with the top raised, George can leave the rear window panel open to ease communication with any rumble seat passengers.

George's son, James Jr., is probably the rare teen-ager who has ridden in a rumble seat.

Very few Cadillacs like this one were built. George's car carried a base price of $2,945 in 1932. He got in touch with the man in Ohio who had owned this rare car for 37 years to learn where he could locate any parts if they should be needed.

George told his wife, Brenda, that his faith in the goodness of mankind was reinforced when the Ohio man sent him a pair of new 9 1/2-inch lenses for the headlights.

He explained he had forgotten to leave them in the car when it was sold.

The George family, for now, is enjoying the new acquisition and having fun learning more about their 68-year-old Cadillac convertible coupe.

Mechanic

like a "ping" to the average person. You might describe it as marbles rattling in an empty can. But if you tell the mechanic that there's a rattle, he'll not think of an ignition problem.

Okay, identifying a problem and coming to the realization that you need professional help is one thing. Actually obtaining competent, honest service can be quite another undertaking. Of course, if you've been satisfied by the repairs that you've been getting over the years, there should be no problem.

On the other hand, if you don't frequent a shop that you feel comfortable going to, ask around. Your neighbors, coworkers and friends may have a good recommendation.

Go into a local auto parts store that sells to professionals and ask the fellows there who they might recommend or where they take their own vehicles for repairs. However you arrive at your choice of repair shop, check for ASE certification.

The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE) of Herndon, Virginia, is an organization that conducts skill and knowledge exams for mechanics. These tests and the certifications are in a vehicle's various systems: air conditioning, fuel systems, etc.

Don't leave your car without a written work order with a cost and time estimate.

Any shop that has ASE-certified technicians will proudly advertise that fact with a large sign. However, since different employees of a given shop may have certification in different systems, be sure that the person who's going to repair your car or truck is certified in the problem area.

You'll know, since certified mechanics wear badges listing their area(s) of expertise. It's quite possible for a mechanic to have certification in many different systems.

Finally, don't leave your car for repairs without a written work order that has a realistic cost and time estimate for the repairs. Insist on being notified after the diagnosis and before the work is begun in case there's a change in the cost due to unforseen problems or you opt to have the work done elsewhere. And when you leave with your repaired vehicle, make sure that you've a written warranty for the parts and repairs.

Where every patient is surrounded by excellence.

Some health systems seem to think progress prompts personal attention. We don't. We think progress is made when patients feel like they are active partners in their community health care provider. It's what we're most proud of at John Muir/Mt. Diablo Health System. It's why we're one of the most well-respected, well-established health systems in the area. It's also the reason our unique knowledge and skills in an environment that fosters collaboration and mutual respect, could advance your skills in our Human Resources Department.

Recruiter

We are looking for an individual with high energy, initiative and a team-oriented approach to work. The ideal candidate will have a minimum of 3 years experience in human resources as a recruiter. Healthcare and/or technical recruitment experience required.
